3 CRUSHED TO DEATH IN COLLAPSE OF FIRE-SWEPT HOMESTEAD HOTEL

Today

All Over, Now.
New Contract Rules.
England Has Troubles.
Zaro Agha Goes Home.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

NOW THAT it is too late for any change in the result, barring some inconceivable mistake by some extremely important person, the political campaign increases its furious intensity. Everybody is speaking almost every minute, but the average voter is not listening intently.

It is difficult now to realize it, but one month hence all the excitement will be over and the situation will be taken for granted. It is difficult for the 123,000,000 to keep their minds on anything but their individual problems for more than a very short time.

FOR MANY, among those that have leisure, the big news is the change in contract bridge scoring. Hereafter you get 1,500 for a grand slam not vulnerable, 2,250 for a grand slam vulnerable, and if, when not vulnerable, you bid recklessly to keep your opponent from making game or rubber, you suffer severely.

Every newspaper carries full details.

THAT BRIDGE news, as unimportant to the real world as the death of a mouse in a Chinese cellar, interests many, while the news that Dr. Willis Rodney Whitney has resigned from active work after directing the General Electric research laboratories for thirty-two years, interests few.

The news that astronomers are looking for the "lost comet of 1866," expected to return and visit us in the first two weeks of November, interests even fewer.

That comet, also called "Temple's Comet," was expected to appear in 1899, accompanied by showers of shooting stars. Neither shower nor comet appeared.

There was a time when everybody paid attention to comets, believing them sent by the Almighty to make us repent, and possibly to wipe out the earth.

DR. WHITNEY, of General Electric, whose scientific work is a blessing to every human being, will be succeeded by Dr. Coolidge, formerly associated with him in laboratory work. Both are graduates of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

ENGLAND HAS trouble that her faculty of "muddling through" will settle. A mob marches on Buckinham Palace, compelling the police to use clubs energetically. This is the first demonstration against British royalty in a long time.

Railroad strikes are threatened. British workmen refusing to accept the statement that you can't pay out more than you take in. And to make the railroad situation worse, 70,000 British mill workers have struck against the proposed reduction of 8 per cent in wages. All the world has troubles.

THE OLDEST Turk, Zaro Agha, returns home to Istanbul, after wandering around America and Europe for two years collecting money.

He believes that he is 156 years old, and he is probably far beyond 100. His wife, past 80, pulled her veil over her face when she saw him coming in European clothing, not believing that he could be the same man in such strange gear.

When she saw it was really he, she gave bread to all the stray dogs in the neighborhood, in thanksgiving for his safety.

CLOTHES MAKE a difference. Some savages that once wore only breech cloths, and now wear civilized coats and trousers, still wear the breech cloth under the trousers. Their theory is that if you lack a breech cloth you are not decently dressed.

The first automobiles had dashboards. It is hard to change a habit.

MANY YOUNG Chinese, influenced supposedly by propaganda from Russia, have joined the "Communist Youth Corps." Nanton's government, which tends to make Communism uncomfortable, yesterday executed three young women and twenty-two young men, simply because they were Communists.

FRENCH BROKERS, who work hard for business, will hereafter keep the Paris "bourse," which is the French stock exchange, open until half past three in the afternoon, giving them thirty minutes of New York quotations, to speculate or invest in New York's market "on the same day."

New York brokers will know how to profit by that.

THE WHEAT news is not good for the Republican party. Yesterday in Chicago the price of wheat fell to a "new all-time low" price. For the Republicans, the price of wheat dropping is like temperature rising for a sick child.

Another "low" was the price of money "on call." If you felt like speculating in stocks yesterday you could borrow all you wanted at 1 per cent. Loans outside the stock exchange were made at three-quarters of one per cent.

All this will seem strange in years to come, when those that will not buy now begin buying at higher prices, and the gambling craze starts up again.

PITTSBURGH MAN LINKED IN SUICIDE

Ex-Show Girl, Owing Rent, Ends Life; Note Left Son

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A former show girl, who got behind in her rent while maintaining her son in a school at Irvington-on-Hudson, committed suicide in Queens today by gas.

The woman, Mrs. Barbara Larid, 35, left a note addressed to "Junior Dear," the son. It read:

"Your Loving Mother."

According to police, Mrs. Larid recently separated from her husband. Last night she telephoned to the landlord that she did not have the money to pay her November rent.

While police sought trace of her husband, a telegram was sent to Henry Finney, of 18 Waldeck street, Pittsburgh, notifying him of the woman's death. It was not known if he is related to her, but a card with his name inscribed on it was found among her belongings.

ROOSEVELT RAPS G.O.P. 'COERCION'

Democratic Nominee Claims 'Sweep' in New England

By RAYMOND L. BORST
International News Service.

EN ROUTE WITH GOV. ROOSEVELT IN NEW ENGLAND, Nov. 1.—Leaving behind a united and fighting Democracy in Massachusetts and confident that the northern industrial states have rallied behind the Democratic national ticket for a "new deal," Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt left Boston today on a 300-mile swing through Rhode Island and Connecticut and a section of the Bay State.

"I'm not conceding a single New England state to the Republicans—not even Vermont—and I'm dead certain that Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts will be found in the Democratic column one week from today."

Expert chauffeuring of Gov. Roosevelt's car prevented an accident at the Plainville-North Attleboro town lines. A sedan was standing along the road on the righthand side.

As the parade approached, the car suddenly darted out, cutting

THE RUINS OF FIRE-SWEPT EUREKA HOTEL, ABANDONED HOMESTEAD BUILDING . . THREE KINDLING-PICKERS WERE KILLED

MEN SEEKING FIREWOOD TRAPPED

Fourth Victim Taken To Hospital, Other Bodies Sought

Three men are known dead, and several others are believed buried in the ruins of the fire-swept old Eureka Hotel, 106-108 West Fifth avenue, Homestead, which collapsed today as they were culling wood from the debris.

The dead are Peter Ratkiewicz, 60, of 107 Fourth avenue, Homestead; his son, Adam, 28, and August Brazenski, 25, of 300 West street.

Anthony Ratkiewicz, 27, another son of Peter, rescued from the ruins, was taken to the Homestead Hospital, but later discharged. He was hurt slightly.

SEEK OTHER VICTIMS

Firemen and volunteers were combing the ruins for others said by witnesses to have been caught in the falling timbers.

One of the men, all of whom are said to have been unemployed, was said to have pulled a beam from its place on the first floor causing the ruins of the three-story frame structure which was virtually destroyed by fire last night to crash down.

The unoccupied, dilapidated hotel has been an eyesore, according to neighbors, who had asked the Borough Council to remove it.

GIRL DISCOVERS FIRE

The fire was discovered shortly before 8 a. m. by Miss Mary Scott, of 102 West Fifth avenue, Homestead. Police said the blaze probably was started by vagrants who have occupied the place, or by sparks from a locomotive.

The flames had progressed too far by the time firemen arrived to save the hotel, but the firemen prevented them from spreading to the Scott home and that of Thomas McCarthy, 104 West Fifth avenue.

The hotel was a popular stopping place in pre-prohibition da[ys]

TUNNEY'S WIFE UNDER KNIFE

PARIS, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Mrs. Polly Lauder Tunney, wife of the former world's heavyweight champion, was operated on at the American Hospital here last night, it was learned today.

Dr. DeVaux, one of the surgeons who attended her, said that the operation was not a serious one. He added:

"It was merely undertaken as an aid to healing. There is no question of any mastoid complications."

Mrs. Tunney was able to return to her hotel today.

Penna. Man Named Envoy to Poland

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Appointment of F. Lamont Belin, of Washington, D. C., and Waverly, Pa., as ambassador to Poland was made today by President Hoover.

Belin, a career man in the diplomatic service, will succeed John N. Willys, Toledo, O., automobile manufacturer, who recently resigned in order to devote more time to business affairs.

Plane Lands On Campus, Perils Girls

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 1.—(INS.)—A United States Army observation plane was forced down on the girls' athletic field on the Ohio State University campus by motor trouble today, threatening injuries to members of a co-ed physical education class who were just leaving the field.

The girls narrowly missed being struck. Capt. M. C. Harper and Lieut. C. G. Kenney, both of Mitchel Field, L. I., were uinjured, but the undercarriage and the lower left wing of the ship were damaged. The plane was en route from Kansas City of Port Columbus.

Myrtle St. Pierre 'Welcomes' Aimee

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton and her choir-singer husband, Dave Hutton, had hoped to slip into town quietly today after their Central American trip, but instead they found a reception committee—serving court orders on them in the heart balm suit won by Myrtle St. Pierre. Miss St. Pierre won a $5,000 judgment against Hutton, and has instituted action to collect it. She was also at the train to welcome the Huttons.

'Phantom Gunman' Seeks New Victim

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Erie's "phantom gunman"—a mystery man who shoots from the side of a railroad viaduct at passing motorists—appeared again for the fourth time in four months during the night, police reported today.

James Levi escaped unhurt when the gunman's bullet shattered the windshield of his automobile as he was about to drive into the viaduct.

GOV. ROOSEVELT GAINS IN WEST

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Gov. Roosevelt staged comebacks in the group of battleground central states the past week, according to latest returns in the nation-wide presidential postcard poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in cooperation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

In Illinois he received a majority of 873 out of 3,087 new ballots in contrast with a Hoover majority on the previous weekly tabulation of 207 out of 2,903 ballots.

In Indiana, Roosevelt got a 73 majority out of 1,149 new votes, compared with a Hoover majority of 61 the week before out of 1,777 votes.

In Ohio, Roosevelt held Hoover to a 271 majority out of 3,073, whereas Hoover had drawn a majority of 1,129 the week before out of 5,621 ballots.

It was in Pennsylvania that Roosevelt made his most promis-

Husband Sentenced, Dancer Takes Poison

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Weary from her long and futile attempt to save "her man" from prison, Mrs. Mamita Coleman Hayes Formes, 25, the dancer, was near death today from self-administered poison.

The beautiful brunette and Herbert Formes were married in the county jail Thursday, the day before he was taken to San Quentin to serve five years to life for a $14 robbery.

Hoover Sees 'Peril' In Changing Regime

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—As President Hoover arrived back in Washington today from New York, where he spoke last night, it became apparent that the final keynote of the Republican campaign is to be that the Democrats are inherently "destructive," and that if they are restored to power in the election a week from today it will mean far-reaching changes in the conduct and philosophy of government.

This was the note struck by President Hoover in his Madison Square Garden speech last night—a speech which Mr. Hoover told his intimates he considered the most important of the campaign—and it will provide the pitch for Republican orators in the speech-filled days of the last week.

1924 RECALLED

For a parallel, it is necessary to go back to the campaign of 1924, when Calvin Coolidge charged the same thing. In that campaign, which he directed almost entirely at the third party movement of La Follette, Mr. Coolidge declared that the very foundations of "the American

Seek Glassford as Chief Of Johnstown Police

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, resigned chief of Washington police, today will be offered the post of chief of police of Johnstown, Mayor Eddie McCloskey announced. McCloskey's statement was made after he listened to recommendations of E. P. Goodrick, efficiency engineer, made to Council. Goodrick, engaged jointly by the city and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation to make a municipal survey, recommended Glassford's appointment as police chief in his final report.

Power of appointment lies with the Mayor, who said the position would be tendered Gen. Glassford later in the day. McCloskey is an admirer of the former Washington police chief, whose handling of the Bonus Army during its occupation of the capital, was lauded by McCloskey. McCloskey became host to the army after it was evacuated from Washington by federal troops.

The report of Goodrick said that politics and jealousies had rendered the present police system inefficient, with the youth of Johnstown growing up with little regard for law observance. Goodrick recommended that Gen. Glassford be hired for one year, Chief of Police C. E. Briney to "take a vacation for six months," and that a new position be created to take care of juvenile delinquents.

Horse Long Dead Gets Bequest in Will

It's been many years since Polly passed on, many more years since she was able to fit herself into the shafts and trot the Boyce family for the Sunday ride.

But she was remembered today. In her will Mrs. Gertrude V. Boyce, of South Fayette Township, set aside a trust fund of $4,000 to take care of Polly. And Mrs. Boyce stipulated for the rest of her days Polly wasn't to work.

Mrs. Boyce died 10 days ago. But the will was drawn in 1913. And after Polly's death it was unchanged.

The horse's trust fund and the rest of Mrs. Boyce's $23,000 estate will go to her grandchildren. A son, John R. Boyce, and Fidelity Title and Trust Company, are executors.

CITY MAY SUE TO RECOVER SUCCOP'S $50,000 BOND

ACTION WAITS OUTCOME OF COURT PLEA

Council to Question Kerr on Value of Alderdice Job

The city may sue to recover the $50,000 bond posted by Bertram L. Succop, former supplies director, convicted of malfeasance and sentenced to one year in jail.

City officials today were of the opinion to that voiced yesterday in Council by Assistant City Solicitor Thomas B. Benner, that final outcome of Succop's case, which has been appealed to Superior Court, will determine the city's course. Benner said:

"Succop's case is still pending in the courts. When a final decision is reached, we can determine what course is to be taken."

KERR'S VIEWS

The question of Succop's bond was mentioned in a letter to Council by John D. Houston, protesting that "35 per cent of the city payroll was graft," and that R. J. Alderdice, budget controller, held a needless job.

Houston's original complaint as to the manner in which city supplies were purchased led to trial of Succop and Mayor Charles H. Kline. The latter, convicted on one count, was freed by the judge's decision. A previous attempt by the citizens' committee to surcharge Succop was dropped pending outcome of the trial.

Houston's recent charges will be aired at a hearing before Council tomorrow or Thursday, with Houston invited to attend.

City Controller James P. Kerr will be asked to report on his opinion as to whether Alderdice's post is unnecessary.

GRAFT CHARGES

Houston, in his letter, charged that he has names of many persons drawing city salaries up to $4,800 in unnecessary and useless positions. In a statement today Houston said unless Council decides that the position of budget controller is unnecessary, he does not feel that it will be worth while to bring to Council's attention any other positions which he believes are a waste of taxpayers' money.

When City Clerk Robert Clark had finished reading the Houston letter, Councilman Harry Little moved that it be received and referred to committee. Councilman Garland then asked if that was the end of the matter, saying that to send it to committee was to finish it altogether. He was aided by Councilman Charles Anderson who demanded that it could be brought up any time later for discussion.

Garland added that there were some matters in the letter which reflected on Council and should be given consideration.

CLASH OVER LETTER

Herron then said:

"The letter was printed in the newspapers and you have had opportunity to read it."

Garland replied:

"The newspapers printed only part of it."

Herron's reply then began the controversy. He said:

Garland answered:

"Well, I would like to hear it all and there were some parts which I did not get. I don't want to see this thing hurried through like this."

"You can't talk like that in here."

"I'll talk as much as I like and you won't stop me."

"Say that again and I will. You can't make charges that the clerk deliberately read it quickly so you didn't hear."

"I did not say that. I said I did not hear it."

system" were threatened by the opposition.

Mr. Hoover made the same accusations last night. He asserted that "the new deal" promised by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and his Progressive allies means a radical departure from government as it has been conducted, and is such as "to undermine and destroy our American system."

Mr. Hoover described "the American system" as being based upon "ordered liberty, through freedom to the individual," coupled with a willingness of such individual to co-operate for the public good. This, he charged, the Democrats propose to destroy.

FUNDAMENTAL IDEALS

He asserted that during the three years of depression he and the Republican party, under his leadership, had remained steadfast to these fundamental ideals, frustrated at times by the Democrats in Congress, but in the main successful. He said:

"To enter upon a series of deep changes, to embark upon this inchoate new deal which has been propounded in this campaign, would be to undermine and destroy our American system."

To understand fully the "revolutionary" changes sponsored by the Democratic candidate, he asserted, the public must look beneath the "platitudes and emotional appeals" or campaign oratory—it must look at the measures advocated by the Democratic-controlled House at the last session of Congress.

And it must look further, he declared, to the demands of such Roosevelt supporters as Senator Norris, Senator La Follette, Senator Cutting, Senator Huey Long, Senator Wheeler, William Randolph Hearst "and other exponents of a social philosophy different from the traditional American one."

After reading this list of names he added:

"Unless these men feel assurance of support to their ideas they certainly would not be supporting these candidates and the Democratic party.

"I may say at once that the changes proposed from all these Democratic principles and allies are of the most profound and penetrating character. If they are brought about this will not be the America which we have known in the past."

CITES EIGHT POINTS

In substantiation of his charge that Democrats "were destructive," Mr. Hoover cited eight points:

1—That they (the Democrats) proposed to "raid the Treasury" for the benefit of sections and groups.

2—That they proposed to inflate currency.

3—That they proposed to "put the government into the personal banking business."

4—That they proposed to reduce the Hawley-Smoot tariff rates and substitute therefore "a competitive tariff for revenue."

5—That they plan to put the government "into the power business."

6—That they have promised jobs to all unemployed. This accusation was based upon a letter of Gov. Roosevelt's in which he said that he "would support measures for the inauguration of self-liquidating public works such as utilization of water resources, flood control, land reclamation, to provide for all surplus labor at all times."

7—That they propose to make the United States Supreme Court a partisan institution.

8—That the Democrats are preaching "a gospel of despair" concerning the future of America industrially.

This includes projected speeches at Chicago, Springfield, Ill., Minneapolis and St. Louis—with still a possibility that his final invasion of the Middle West may be extended to the Pacific Coast.

FARLEY SCOFFS AT G.O.P.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—President Hoover's speech at Madison Square Garden was warmly praised by Republicans and lambasted by Democrats today.

At Republican headquarters it was termed "a magnificent address" by Senator Felix Hebert, eastern G. O. P. manager, while at Democratic national headquarters Chairman James A. Farley issued a statement saying the speech "sounded like that of a desperate man who knows defeat is inevitable."

Republican party leaders predicted that "the drift to President Hoover, markedly noticeable for two weeks," had received new impetus and that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt "will be engulfed on election day."

Farley, optimistic as ever, openly scoffed at these Republican claims. He said there is no question but that Roosevelt will win. Concerning Mr. Hoover's speech, he said:

"I was far more impressed by what the President didn't say than by what he said. I heard the report that he had a very important commitment to make on prohibition, but he remained true to the ducking and dodging of the Republican platform and failed to say one single word on this subject of such vast importance politically, socially and economically to the entire nation."

Widow of T. R. Shares Honors With Hoover

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—From the peace of Oyster Bay, where Theodore Roosevelt sleeps on a grassy knoll, a shy lady in black has stepped into the clamor of a great political campaign.

The widow of the twenty-sixth President of the United States came to the aid of the thirty-first President last night. In an appearance that was a surprise to the audience at Madison Square Garden she made one of the few speeches of her long life.

A roar of welcome greeted her as she stepped forward, bareheaded, to face the throng that stood on its feet and gazed into her face. The cheering went on. Mrs. Hoover, on the platform beside her, had laid down her bouquet of chrysanthemums to applaud with the multitude.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, who is 71 years old, stood there, calmly smiling. At last she lifted a black-gloved hand for silence. Her voice, clear though not strong, was heard:

"I am a real New Yorker and it is fitting and right that I should welcome the President of the United States into this city where I have spent my childhood and my early youth. I greet him with affection and admiration.

"It is with very great pleasure that I introduce the President of the United States."

Then she stepped back out of the limelight.

JAHNCKE HERE, OPENS FIRE ON ROOSEVELT

Assistant Navy Head Speaks to Women At Meeting

Ernest Lee Jahncke, assistant secretary of the navy, attacked the record of Franklin D. Roosevelt as Governor of New York at a luncheon of the Hoover club today in the William Penn Hotel.

The luncheon, designed to stir the women voters for the candidacy of President Hoover, was presided over by Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence. Mrs. Marion M. Scranton, Republican National Committeewoman from Pennsylvania, lauded the record of President Hoover through a trying period.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Hundreds of women listened to the speakers. In his speech Jahncke said:

"All the harsh words of Gov. Roosevelt cannot hide his failure in an office much smaller, much less important, than the President of the United States.

"Gov. Roosevelt is not an irresponsible party hack turned loose in a remote section of the country, but the Democratic standard bearer, the titular head of his party, who employs this somewhat unstatesmanlike method of attmepting to gain votes.

"I think by such methods, by such demagogic appeals, the Democratic candidate nominates himself for the position to which he is so fond of referring. I speak of the 'forgotten man.'"

Mrs. Scranton said:

"The women elected Hoover in 1928 and he is now better fitted than ever to be the leader of the coutry. I am confident the women again will assist in his election.

INAUGURATES REMEDIES

"He has inaugurated legislation and remedies to deal with the present economic situation which must be carried out by a continuance of his administration if the country is to receive their full benefit.

"Certain stubborn individuals insist things could not be worse and that any change would be for the better. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

"Roosevelt is dealing only in generalities.

"It is impossible to elect him without Republican votes. Pennsylvania particularly should be grateful to the Republican party for the manner in which the policies of this party have helped the growth of this state."

Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, described Philadelphia's reception to President Hoover yesterday as one of irrepressible enthusiasm."

VOTE STEALING PLOT CHARGED

HARRISBURG, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Charging that attempts are planned "to steal votes from Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt in certain sections of Pennsylvania," Warren Van Dyke, Democratic state chairman, asks Democratic workers to notify him of election irregularities.

He said that "regardless of the certain Democratic victory next week, all attempts at vote theft will be prosecuted."

DAVIS SOUNDS 'FEAR' WARNING

READING, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—United States Senator James J. Davis, in an address last night, said he believes a Democratic victory in the approaching election "would mean disaster for many home industries."

Davis expressed fear of injury to business "through downward revision of a tariff wall which even now has failed to prevent serious inroads from abroad."

Dining with Gen. Edward Martin, chairman of the state committee; Mrs. Worthington Scranton, national committeewoman, and other Republican leaders, he said he sees "an awakening of enthusiasm among the masses which presages a Republican victory. He said:

"People are beginning to realize that a change in government would be injurious to the recovery of business. We must find other sources for taxation. Why not divert the huge amounts of money now pouring into illegal hands. If we would legalize and tax beer we would gain in revenue more than enough to cover governmental deficit. This would also mean a reduction in taxes on overburdened real estate."

of the "National Unemployed Workers' Movement," an organization branded by the British government as Communist in make-up and purpose and subsidized by Moscow.

London authorities were hopeful that Hannington's arrest would disrupt the march on Parliament scheduled for this evening. Rejecting peaceful petition, Hannington announced plans for the demonstration yesterday, asserting he would rather rely upon "mass strength" to bludgeon his way into Parliament and lay his case before the House of Commons.

The arrest of Hannington was believed a desperate effort by authorities to forestall another bloody riot, such as those which occurred in Hyde Park last week and in Trafalgar Square on Sunday.

'ARMY' DISORDERLY

News of his arrest spread like wild fire through the ranks of his tattered followers. Within an hour a group of 400 marchers were reported heading toward the police station in an attempt to invade the place and rescue their leader.

Police succeeded in persuading the advance guard of this group to retrace their steps through Bloomsbury.

INSULL PAPERS DELAYED HERE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Bad flying weather in the Pittsburgh district caused a further setback today in the plans of Illinois state authorities to obtain a presidential warrant for the arrest of Samuel Insull, Sr., former Chicago public utilities potentate, now a refugee in Greece.

Two representatives of the Illinois state's attorney's office, Charles A. Bellows and Andrew Vlachos, who have been working in Washington on the case for the past two weeks, had expected to obtain the presidential warrant today. Sworn papers bearing on the case which were en route here from the office of the Governor of Illinois at Springfield were held up, however, at Pittsburgh when bad weather brought about cancellation of the mail trip to Washington.

The final week of the campaign found the Democratic presidential nominee in a belligerent mood and determined to carry the fight to President Hoover until the polls open next Tuesday.

He has accused the President of injuring the dignity of his high office by resorting to personalities in a desperate, eleventh-hour effort to stem what Roosevelt has characterized as a "Democratic tidal wave."

From the same platform in Boston where Al Smith recently pleaded for his election, Governor Roosevelt last night lashed out at President Hoover, accusing him of misstatements, threats and intimidation."

He struck out at em, lovers and are attempting to scare the workers into supporting the Republican ticket. He declared:

"Such conduct is un-American and worthy of censure at the ballot box. Let us fight our political battles with political arguments and not prey upon men's economic necessities."

ANSWERS HOOVER

Almost before the President had finished his speech in New York City, Gov. Roosevelt was answering him before 15,000 wildly cheering men and women in the Boston Arena. Revealing that he had listened to a part of the President's New York address before going to the arena, Gov. Roosevelt said:

"Once more the President has warned against a new deal on the ground that it would change fundamental principles. My new deal is aimed not to change these fundamental principles but to put them into effect."

Again hitting at President Hoover for saying that this "might have been worse," Governor Roosevelt pledged himself, if elected, "to make things better." He added:

"The nation has the capacity to make things better. The nation prays for the leadership of action to make things better. That will be shown in every state next Tuesday. We are through with 'delay'—through with 'despair'—ready and waiting for better days."

Gov. Roosevelt said the chief problems facing the country today are to meet the immediate distress by seeing to it that no one is permitted to starve, and to build upon a permanent basis to guard against a recurrence of present conditions.

After taking a firm stand for a shorter work week, the nominee said:

"But there is one final objective to my policy which is more vital, more basic than all. I seek to restore the purchasing power of the nation. That and that only will put people back to work."

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

Pointing out that both branches of the national government—executive and legislative—must co-operate if the nation is to be guided back on the road to prosperity, Gov. Roosevelt pictured President Hoover as an executive who is forever quarreling with Congress. Roosevelt said:

"He quarreled with a Republican Congress and with half a Republican Congress. He will quarrel with any kind of Congress. He cannot get things done."

Warning against the "false statements of my opponents," the Governor said he favored continued protection for American industry as well as for American agriculture. Asserting that the President does not favor a program of "any kind," Roosevelt added:

"He has closed the door of hope to American agriculture and when he did that he closed the door of hope to industry."

Trunk Slayer's Plea Battled By State

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The state of Arizona held today, in a brief filed to combat Winnie Ruth Judd's appeal from conviction and death sentence for the slaying of Agnes Anne Leroi, that "she is in no position to complain."

Oral argument of the appeal probably will be set for the next docket of the Supreme Court.

James R. McDougal, assistant attorney general, asserted Superior Court Judge Howard C. Speakman, who presided over the trial of the slender 22-year-old woman last February, had made his instructions to the jury "highly favorable" to Mrs. Judd.

The brief said "the record discloses the appellant committed a cold blooded and merciless murder and one of the most atrocious crimes in the entire history of this state," but Mrs. Judd received "the benefit of every legal right to which she was entitled and the most courteous consideration at the hands of the trial court."

Mrs. Judd is in the Arizona State Prison at Florence.

The state still holds against her an indictment for the slaying of Hedvig Samuelson, a companion of Mrs. Leroi. The women were slain in their Phoenix home and their bodies were sent to Los Angeles in trunks.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Dr. William C. Judd, husband of Winnie Ruth Judd convicted in Arizona "trunk murder" case, was acquitted yesterday by a jury in Municipal Court on charges of practicing medicine in California without a license.

600,000 IN STATE HUNT SMALL GAME AS SEASON OPENS

Precautions Urged; 72 Deaths Last Year Cited

Mighty nimrods — 600,000 of them—today are tramping through Pennsylvania's woods in search of small game. For the hunting season has opened for rabbit, quail, pheasant and related game. Thousands of unemployed men and women are among the hunters.

Approximately 27,000 hunting licenses have been issued in Allegheny County, it was reported at the County Treasurer's office. Last year's total of 36,000 licenses probably will have been reached by the time the big game season is under way.

Conditions are auspicious for one of the best hunting seasons in the history of the state, the Game Commission announced.

PRECAUTIONS URGED

October rains have so moistened the fallen leaves and underbrush that Gov. Pinchot was not forced to postpone opening of the season as he threatened during the September drought.

The crackle of underbrush from man and game and the echoes of a million shots awakened the sun as the hunters started for their prey before dawn and continued through the day.

State Game Protector Ralph A. Liphart, of Allegheny County, was in the woods before daybreak, examining hunters' licenses.

Protectors and deputies, with the state police, late today are patroling all roads to question hunters and search machines.

Because of extensive restocking during the recent closed seasons on some species, the commission believes hunters cannot complain this year of a scarcity of game.

Hunters are urged to take precautions that bloodshed be confined to the ranks of the hunted. The commission warned:

"Take your time. Aim, stop, look, listen, and then pull the trigger. What's a rabbit compared to a fellow hunter?"

72 KILLED LAST YEAR

Seventy-two fatalities were recorded for the 1931 season, according to state records. Thirty of the fatalities were self-inflicted, the others suffered at the hands of other hunters. A total of 367 non-fatal accidents was recorded last year; 97 were self-inflicted and 270 were inflicted by others.

The legal quarry and the bag limits are:

Wild ducks, November 1 to December 31, daily bag limit 15, season 60; wild geese and brants, November 1 to December 31, four a day, 30 a season; coots and mudhens, November 1 to December 31, 25 a day, no season limit; wild turkeys, November 1 to November 26, one a day and 30 a season.

These birds may only be killed today and Wednesday of this week, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday of next week, and the last three days of the next two weeks. The killing is restricted in certain counties.

Male ringnecked pheasants, season same as turkey season, two a day and six a season. No counties closed.

Ruffed grouse, season same as turkey, two a day, 12 a season. Quail, six a day, 24 a season. Cottontail rabbits, five a day, 30 a season. Gray, black and fox squirrels, November 1 to November 30, six a day and 20 a season.

Keep Politics Out Of Education, He Urges

That politics and the public school system should be kept apart and that prohibition cannot be enforced today were opinions expressed with the wisdom of 98 years by David B. Oliver, long a leader in the city's educational and industrial life.

"Uncle Davy," as he is affectionately known, reminisced with friends and members of his family at his Termon avenue home yesterday—observing his 98th birthday. As if knowing the occasion, "Uncle Davy's" companion, "Scotty," a dog, rolicked about.

Between the receipt of telegrams of congratulations and bouquets of flowers, "Uncle Davy" told of the early days of Pittsburgh and discussed today's public affairs. As the leader who was responsible for the eliminating of politics from the school system and making the offices appointive, the present move to return the school board to elective office brought Mr. Oliver's comment:

"Keep the system out of politics. To make the board elective would be a very bad thing. Anything politics gets into is very sure to turn out crooked."

Advocating moderation, Mr. Oliver said of prohibition:

"I don't think very much of prohibition. You cannot enforce it and a law that cannot be enforced isn't very good. I believe in moderation. You must start in schools to get people to believe in it. We should be moderate in views, opinions and actions."

SCHWAB'S NIECE HURT IN CRASH

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Four girls, including a niece of Charles M. Schwab, were injured when their automobile overturned on the New York pike between Phillipsburg and Bloomsburg, N. J., today.

The injured are Mary Schwab, Normany Park, Norristown, N. J.; Yerda Barnett, Hellertown, Pa.; Evelyn Heffelfinger and Diana Bransteader, both of Bethlehem, Pa. All are in Easton and Phillipsburg hospitals. Miss Schwab and Miss Bransteader are believed to have skull fractures.

NEVADA BANKS TAKE 'HOLIDAY'

RENO, Nev., Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Nevada today started a 12-day bank and business "holiday."

Acting on "the conviction that the people of Navada will be best protected in this action," Lieut. Gov. Morley Griswold last night declared the "holiday," extending until November 12.

Griswold is heading the state government in the absence of Gov. Fred Balzar, who is in Washington to negotiate with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for loans for Nevada business houses.

Following Griswold's action, George Wingfield, Nevada capitalist, announced the 12 Nevada banks of which he is president would take advantage of the "holiday." In a formal statement Wingfield declared:

"It is my opinion that a bank holiday will give us all a breathing spell and will permit the working out of arrangements for the protection of our industries and our depositors."

Sergeant Pauses For Coffee, Loses Hunting Outfit

Police Sergt. R. C. Brandt, of 232 Matthews avenue, Knoxville, reported to police early today that his automobile, loaded with hunting equipment, valuable guns, ammunition, etc., and a prized English beagle hunting dog, responding to the name of "Bessie," had been stolen.

Ready to join the thousands trekking over hill and dale for wild game, Brandt had entered his home for a "second cup of coffee." When he returned he discovered his loss. Brandt reports to the Carrick Police Station.

Madrid Press Scores Abuse of Eastmans

MADRID, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—The Madrid press protested today against police treatment of Max Eastman, famous American author and editor, and his wife, when they were arrested Saturday with nine Communist leaders following a meeting which police declared was held secretly in violation of the law.

Although the Eastmans were released soon afterward, the press charged they were treated badly in the course of the proceedings.

REVELERS' CARS SKID, 3 DROWN

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Speeding homeward in a blinding rain, two cars carrying Halloween merrymakers skidded off the highways and three persons were drowned as the machines toppled down steep embankments into swollen streams below.

The dead are Smith O. Tracy, 22, and Hascall Thompson, 21, both of Fairmont, and Miss Dorothy Master, 17, of Mannington, W. Va.

The accidents, almost identical in nature, occurred at practically the same time and at points only a few miles apart.

The car in which Tracy and Thompson lost their lives went over a bank on U. S. Route 19, near this city, and ploughed into the West Fork River after a drop of more than 50 feet.

Four other members of the party forced open the doors of the vehicle and swam to shore.

In the second accident, which happened five miles away on U. S. Route 250, the machine in which Miss Master was riding crashed 75 feet down a steep grade, landing in Ice's Rocks, a stream expanded beyond normal size by recent rains.

Girl Halloween Celebrator Killed

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Nov. 1.—Miss Martha Rettig, 25, of New Castle, returning from a Halloween party, was killed and her companion, Mrs. Lawrence Tate, of Ellwood City, was injured today when their auto crashed into a truck parked on a viaduct spanning Conoquenessing Creek.

Weather Conditions.

The southwestern disturbance developed rapidly northeastward and is now central over the lower lakes, with a trough southward to another center over Maryland. Pressure is also lower over the Dakotas and over British Columbia. High pressure overlies the interior of the country from the Upper Mississippi Valley to Texas, with attendant fair, cool weather in those regions. Rain fell over most of the eastern states during the past 24 hours, with amounts in excess of one inch at many places, but weather is generally fair over the country today, except in the lower lake region and southward to North Carolina. Temperatures were below freezing in the northern plains, the Upper Mississippi Valley and the lake region.

River Conditions.

As a result of generous rainfall over the district, the rivers are rising slowly. Stage at Franklin is 1.1 foot; Lock No. 7, 11.9; Pittsburgh, 11.7; Dam No. 4, 8.8; No. 6, 7.9; No. 10, 8.2; No. 12, 7.1. The rams are up. The rivers will continue to rise slowly. About one-half foot rise indicated at Pittsburgh.

EXPERTS OPEN FIRE ON NEW BRIDGE CODE

Changes May Impede Growth of Game, Sims Says

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Contract experts said they had many misgivings as the new code of rules went into effect today.

Several stressed the lack of simplicity in scoring no-trump tricks below the line and doubled undertricks.

Criticizing in particular the varying count of no-trump tricks over book, 30 for the odd-numbered tricks and 40 for the even-numbered, William S. Karn suggested that suit valuations be revised forthwith to 30 for no-trump, 25 for majors and 20 for minors, with a count of 90 for game.

Ely Culbertson warned that no card game with a complicated count could endure.

MISTAKE, SIMS SAYS

P. Hal Sims said it was a great mistake to change calculations while the number of devotees of the game was still rapidly increasing. He expressed fear that many players would adhere to the scoring methods they knew. The reaction might be so unfavorable, he said, that fututre changes would not be under the guidance of the Whist Club of New York.

So far as his personal play is concerned, Sims is delighted. He believes that his requirements for stronger hands to open the bidding in first and second positions than in third and fourtht will enable him to penalize opponents more than ever. He thinks more attention will be paid to his method of bidding slams, cue bidding of aces after partners have agreed upon the trump.

Among the few bridgemasters defending the increased bonus for grand slams were Shepard Barclay and Gratz M. Scott. Barclay regards the new slam premium as like a forward pass in football; it gives the one behind a chance to get ahead quickly. Scott said that the heavy bonus would add zest to the game.

CULBERTSON WARY

The bonus found little favor with most tournament players. Culbertson predicted a malignant rash of grand slam bidding by players in general, with the result that they would lose many a rubber they could win by confining themselves to little slams. He predicted that the grand slam would be barred from tournament play.

Culbertson, David Burnstine and Sims expressed the thought that in tournament play the swing for one successful grand slam will be so great that at times it may be impossible for a better team to overcome the lead an inferior one attains by shooting the works on a slam. Hitherto Sims has forbidden his teams to bid grand slams.

Sidney S. Lenz said he was disappointed that penalties for undoubled not vulnerable undertricks were not increased to deter psychic bidding, but he thinks the new code will be accepted quickly by the public.

Pitt Celebrators Free On Apology to Police

Three Pitt students, arrested in yesterday's celebration of the victory over Notre Dame, were freed in Morals Court today after they apologized to the police.

The three, Homer Collins, 21, of 1117 Harvard road, Thornburg; Robert McClure, 19, of Coltart square, and Hyman Pober, 18, of 3305 Juliet street, were part of the throng that tried to crash the Stanley Theater.

Mounted Patrolman Louis Ritchie testified he had arrested Collins when the latter pushed him and McClure when he called to other students to take Collins away from the officer.

Patrolman Charles Crummer testified Pober had called the officers names. Pober said he had only said:

"All policemen have flat feet."

Magistrate Thomas D. Jones said to the students:

"Everybody was just as happy over the outcome of the Pitt-Notre Dame game as you were and wanted you to have a good time. But you must respect the officers. They are not only friends of students but of everyone else. Apologize to these officers and you are discharged."

They complied.

Two Hunters Shot As Season Opens

The first hunting accident of the season here sent Kenneth Hill, 21, of 96 Longfellow street, Vandergrift, to the Citizens' General Hospital, New Kensington, with wounds in the face and injury to his right eye. Hill, it was reported, was hunting with his brother and father in the fields near Vandergrift and was struck by part of the charge the brother fired at a rabbit.

How Men, Women Vote

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Revised tabulations of returns to date in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States follow. The table shows the division by states of the Hoover and Roosevelt vote, and how it is subdivided or each as between men and women. It also shows the potential lectoral vote for each candidate.

Roosevelt Makes Rally In Central West Area

ng showing. He turned a Hoover majority of 956 out of 3,914 votes the previous week into a Roosevelt majority this time of 287 out of 3,511 new ballots.

The Illinois result in the current voting should remove any question as to that state being safely in the Roosevelt column.

The Indiana turn back to Roosevelt should argue well for his winning that state despite the fact that he holds it by only a 52 per cent margin.

The cumulative gain of the Hoover gains in Ohio reveals that state as closely contested fighting ground even though the poll still leans to Hoover.

Likewise Pennsylvania cannot be definitely classed as lost to Roosevelt, though Hoover shows a poll lead in the state, in the face of the new returns giving Roosevelt the better end of the late votes.

In the wake of his Detroit speech Hoover has shown a decided pickup in Michigan. With a gain of 161 in today's tabulation he reduced Roosevelt's Michigan majority from 1,013 to 852 after having cut it down 82 the week before and 83 the week before that.

PUPILS FAVOR ROOSEVELT

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—High school students whose opinions in the main can be accepted as reflecting the composite mind of the family home say that Gov. Roosevelt will be elected President a week from today.

The results of a nation-wide poll of more than 50,000 high school students, conducted through a group of publications used in the high schools of the country for the study of current history, has just been made public. It shows that 57 per cent of these students who received questionnaires since October 12 are of the opinion that the Democratic candidate will be the country's choice over President Hoover.

It is little less than remarkable how closely this poll of the boys and girls, who will be the new crop of voters in another presidential election four years hence, agrees with the nation-wide poll of the millions of voters of today conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States, and also with the poll of still more millions conducted by the Literary Digest.

'14-Count' Cited By Tunney in Flaying G.O.P.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Scoring the Republican party for its "complacency," Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, predicted victory for the Democratic ticket in a rally of 18,000 partisans at the Chicago Stadium last night.

He predicted that beer would be legal by next June. Making an allusion to the famous "14 count," he said:

"Let's shoot the administration with the ballot, and they won't get up at he end of 14 seconds. I will take them 14 years to get up."

$2,500,000 UP TO MAKE JOBS

Industrial rehabilitation work totaling approximately $2,500,000 has been pledged in the Pittsburgh and Wheeling areas, according to an announcement toay in Cleveland by Randolph Eide, chairman of the Industrial Rehabilitation Committee of the Fourth Federal Reserve District, announcing pledges totaling $100,000,000 in the nation as a whole.

The pledges are the first month's efforts of the committee to stimulate employment through initiation of an industrial rehabilitation program. Eide said:

"Reports of actual or contemplated improvement jobs are pouring into my office daily. Most of the jobs are to be undertaken within the next 12 months, providing additional employment during the coming winter."

10TH MAN HELD IN FLOGGINGS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—A tenth suspect in the series of floggings reported in Jacksonville recently was arrested here last night and the Duval County grand jury continued its investigation of the wave of "terrorism" today.

F. G. Osteen, 34, city dog catcher, was the latest to be taken into custody and Detective Inspector E. L. Acosta said Mamie Hall, a white woman, identified the prisoner as one of a group of men who took her from her home several weeks ago and flogged her. Osteen was charged with assault to murder. He denied any implication.

His arrest followed by a few hours indictment by the grand jury of nine other suspects held in the floggings. They were named in 24 indictments and charges against them included assault to murder, aggravated assault, unlawful assembly, false and illegal imprisonment and robbery.

Five white women were among the 20 persons who have been flogged, police said.

Hoover Wins Poll At Carnegie Tech

President Hoover carried Carnegie Institute of Technology in a straw vote the Tartan, student publication, announced today. Ballots cast by students and faculty gave Hoover 871 votes; Roosevelt, 553; Thomas, 352 and William Z. Foster, 21.

Of the total 560 were potential voters and 939 non-voters.

Roosevelt Wins Waynesburg Poll

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Nov. 1.—Franklin D. Roosevelt defeated Herbert Hoover in the presidential balloting at Waynesburg College, 58 to 51. Norman Thomas polled 14. On the prohibition question the result was: Continuation of present laws, 44; modification, 39; repeal, 21; resubmission, 17.

HARD ROLLS

There's a tremendous difference in hard rolls. One type is made with water—it is a water roll, usually called a French roll—lacking in real nourishment and flavor.

Donahoe's new, improved hard rolls are made with milk, malt, sugar and shortening—besides, of course, the very best Spring Wheat flour (short patent)—which means rolls much richer and tastier—the famous Vienna-type rolls.

Ten operations are necessary to prepare Donahoe's hard rolls for baking—it is a complex, intricate process—every step of which must be carefully, painstakingly completed with mathematical exactness.

Donahoe's Hard Rolls are baked in the old-fashioned way—on the stone hearth in the oven—in a veritable bath of steam. The steam on the rolls causes condensation, the heat of the oven then quickly crystalizes the starch of the flour into a crisp, crunchy crust.

FRENCH BREAD

It takes two bakings—in two different ovens—to bake Donahoe's new, improved French Bread. First the bread is baked until it is about three-quarters done—until it is fairly well-browned. Then the bread is quickly transferred to a hotter oven where the baking is continued until that tempting brown crust—so crisp and crunchy—has been formed.

VIENNA BREAD

Donahoe's new improved Vienna Bread is richer and tastier than the French Bread—and it has a different flavor. The cut in the top of the loaf is made after the bread is half-proofed—then comes the bath of steam—and after the starch of the flour has crystalized and the crust has formed, the steam is turned off and the loaf acquires that deep brown, tempting color that is a distinguishing characteristic of the real true-type Vienna Bread.

Donahoe's new, improved Hard Rolls, French and Vienna Bread—served with Donahoe's Butter, form a combination irresistible to every lover of good food. Stop in today or tomorrow and take home FREE a 13c loaf of French Bread or a 12c loaf of Vienna Bread with a purchase of 1 dozen Hard Rolls for 20c.

FRESH ALL DAY LONG

Important Notice

In order to enjoy to the full the crisp crunchy crusts, the delicious flavor of Donahoe's Hard Rolls, they should be eaten the same day they are bought.

If not eaten until the following day they lose their crisp crunchy freshness and deteriorate into an ordinary roll.

When not eaten until the following day, some of the original crispness can be restored by heating the rolls in a hot oven for a few minutes before serving.

A damp rainy day also tends to take the crispness out of the rolls, even when fresh—so on damp days, if the crispness is gone, reheat the rolls in your oven.

We urgently recommend that these hard rolls be eaten the day they are bought.

HEARST RETIRES $1,000,000 IN BONDS

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—One of the outstanding financial operations for November, which is attracting much attention in banking and investment circles, will be the retirement tomorrow of a block of $1,000,000 Hearst Publications, Inc., first mortgage and collateral trust 6¼ per cent serial gold bonds.

Besides the retirement of the 1932 maturity serial bonds, Hearst Publications, Inc., which is a subsidiary company owned by Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., will also make payment tomorrow of $531,250 semi-annual interest on the remaining outstanding issue of bonds.

For several weeks past funds have been on deposit with the Anglo-California National Bank of San Francisco, trustee under the indenture, to meet the full sinking fund requirements and the semi-annual payments.

In 1931, Hearst Publications, Inc., earnings available for annual bond interest were more than five and one-half times actual requirements.

CASEY NAMED SEAL HEAD

John F. Casey has been named chairman of the 1932 Christmas Seal committee, the Tuberculosis League announced today. The committee will mail 25,000,000 seals to residents of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County this year, the twenty-sixth the sale has been carried on for the benefit of tuberculosis sufferers.

In accepting the chairmanship, Casey said:

"Tuberculosis must be fought with all the skill at our command if the scars of this depression are not to be seen in higher mortality figures."

Dr. Vincent Speaks At Welfare Meeting

"Preservation of Human Values in the Present Crisis" was the subject of Dr. George E. Vincent's talk to members of the Welfare Fund campaign organization following luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce, today. Dr. Vincent is president emeritus of the Rockefeller Foundation. The luncheon was open to the public.

WHARF PLANS AIRED BEFORE U.S. ENGINEER

Hearing on the city's application for federal approval of plans to improve the Allegheny River wharf from Stanwix to Ninth streets was concluded today before Maj. W. D. Styer, United States engineer.

Several persons and groups, including Congressman Harry A. Estep and Downtown businessmen, approved the project, while protests were made by the Propeller Club and the Pittsburgh Coal Exchange. Allegheny County was granted 10 days to study the plans to determine whether they may have any effect on county plans.

COUNCIL FAVORABLE

Council approved the proposal last month when George Vang, contractor, declared he would pay $750,000 of the cost of the million-dollar improvement if given a 15-year lease. The property would then became the city's.

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang said a three-deck structure was desired, the top deck to provide a roadway paralleling Duquesne way, and the two lower decks to care for river freight and automobile parking.

OPPOSITION HEARD

The Propellor Club based its objection on a claim the project is not a part of the progressive plan for improving the entire wharf regions in the Triangle. The Coal Exchange proposed grading and paving of the wharf and Duquesne way rather than the big wharf project.

Edward Snodgrass, Jr., engineer, said the Chamber of Commerce and Better Traffic Committee both favored the project, while J. P. Lindley, superintendent of the Jenkins Arcade Building, presented a petition containing names of about 250 downtown businessmen whom he said indorsed the plan.

28,000 UNPAID IN PHILA.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Today was a "payless payday" for 28,000 Philadelphia city and county workers.

With the emergency borrowing capacity exhausted and only $3,500,000 in taxes paid, the city treasury was without funds to meet the $1,350,000 semi-monthly payroll, officials announced.

While city officials were struggling with the payroll problem, Council's new revenues committee acted to bring in money from new sources.

Overriding protests from private businesses, measures were passed levying a 5-cent tax on theater tickets, a $25 inspection fee on all public eating and drinking establishments, a 5-cent tax on automobiles parked in outdoor and indoor parking places, and a $10 annual inspection fee on all privately-owned rubbish and garbage vehicles.

Moundsville Prison Matron Hurt in Fall

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Suffering with a fractured skull, two broken ribs and possible fracture of the spine, Mrs. Nell Rustler, 47, head matron in the Moundsville prison, is in critical condition today after a fall down a 25-foot stairway. She crashed into a brick wall at the foot of the stairway.

Public Powdering Held Breach of Etiquette

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Oh girls, powdering in public is out.

That's what Miss Theo Bender, St. Louis beauty specialist, told Minnesota hairdressers and cosmetologists at a beauty and style show they're conducting today.

Those who pat shiny noses while restless men stand by not only defy etiquette but submit to a health menace by putting powder on soiled faces, she said.

Miss Bender also had a word about a weapon she said many women were overlooking.

Most men, she explained, can be made helpless by carefully washed eyes and neatly groomed eyebrows.

Estranged Husband Kills Wife, Father

BURNS, Ore., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Police said that enraged at failure to become reconciled with his wife who is suing for divorce, Harry Riley, of Portland, shot and killed her and her father, Carey Thornberg, and wounded her mother, yesterday.

Thieves Rob Office, Safe Blasting Fails

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 1.—Thieves who ransacked the McMahan Coal Company offices, failed in their attempt to dynamite a safe. No money was taken. It was the fourth time the offices had been entered in a year.

HUNT VANISHED BOY AS 'HOBO'

CLEVELAND, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Eight-year-old Ebert Holleron, mysteriously missing 10 days, was presumed today to be alive and leading the life of a "hobo."

After police had about decided he had been killed and his body hidden by a degenerate or a hit-skip automobile driver, word was received from Lorain, O., that Ebert was there October 23, a day after he vanished from his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Judge and their son, Robert, 11, identified pictures of the Holleron boy as of a youngster who dropped off a freight train near their home, accompanied by a man he said was a "friend."

Because the boy's reported visit to the Judges' home in Lorain was nine days ago, police believe he may have traveled great distances since. Accordingly, railroad detectives throughout the Middle West were asked to be on the watch for him.

Leaders to Study Church Union Data

Further recommendations on the plan to merge the Presbyterian and the United Presbyterian churches today were being assembled by a sub-committee for presentation tomorrow to the joint committee on organic union.

The session will be held in the William Penn Hotel with the general chairman, the Rev. William J. Reid, of Pittsburgh, presiding.

Ant Supremacy Ridiculed by Huxley

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Human beings need have no fear that the rulership of the world will be wrested from them by the ant, as recently predicted by a group of scientists, says Prof. Julian Huxley, grandson of the dean of British biologists. He told California Institute of Technology students:

"In the first place, it would take 100,000,000 ants to equal the fighting weight of an average sized man. The size of the ant's brain appears a true index to its efficiency. Ants can not hand down facts from one generation to the next, but are completely 'tied down' by instinct.'

"The ant has a serious handicap to world ascendancy in that the species reached its present development before the evolution of man started, and now appears to be at a standstill."

Eagles Must Stand Trial for Lottery

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey today overruled a demurred filed for Conrad H. Mann, of Kansas City, director general of the Eagles, in an effort to set aside an indictment charging Mann and others with promoting and distributing tickets for a lottery.

Under Judge Caffey's order, Mann, Frank E. Herring, publisher of the Eagles Magazine, and others will go on trial November 14.

STATE'S RELIEF NEEDS GROW

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania is seeking November federal aid for nearly 50 per cent more families than were included in the September request, Mrs. Alice L. Liveright, Secretary of Welfare, told the Bethlehem Family Welfare Association today.

In current applications for Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds, the secretary explained, aid is sought for 365,870 Pennsylvania families, as compared with 280,000 two months ago.

Mrs. Liveright asserted the increased demand has developed despite decreases in the number of the state's unemployed. Of the families seeking aid, she said, 75 per cent were self-sustaining before the depression and deserve consideration in the present emergency.

$25,000 Fire Routs 15 in Hooversville

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—Fifteen persons fled in night attire early today when fire destroyed the Edward Lohr Building, a two-story frame structure in Hooversville, entailing a loss of $25,000. The building housed the Clarence Dull men's store and apartments of Edward Lohr, William Murphy and Orie Rogers families. An adjoining garage and drug store were slightly damaged.

City Takes Health Conservation Honor

The United States Chamber of Commerce has sent to the City Health Department a certificate of honorable mention awarded Pittsburgh in the Inter-Chamber Health Conservation Contest. Pittsburgh drew honorable mention for the work of health conservation among cities of the same population.

ALTON, Ill., Nov. 1.—Justice of the Peace Gorman wonders what's the matter with Cupid. He offered to perform his first marriage ceremony without cost. That was two weeks ago, but there have been no takers.

Mrs. Budd, Mother Of Rail Head, Dies

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Mrs. Mary Budd, 83, mother of Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad and former president of the Great Northern Railroad, died at her home at Multnomah, a Portland suburb, last night.

Preparatory School Damaged by Blaze

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The main building of the Hill School, preparatory school for boys, was damaged last night by fire, which started in a kitchen in the basement. School officials said the loss was small.

Sewickley Wife Asks Divorce and Alimony

Mrs. Susan Wagner, 329 Broad street, Sewickley, seeks a limited divorce from Julius J. Wagner, upholsterer, with alimony. Her suit accuses him of cruelty. Wagner's address also is given as Broad street, Sewickley.

Other divorce libels filed included: Esther S. Neiman vs. Jack Neiman, Rose M. Morris vs. Alfred A. Morris.

Something for Dinner That's Different
CITY CHICKEN

Government inspected meat — lb. 33c — Economical for there is no waste

We've been making "city chicken" for many of our customers; so we decided to let all Pittsburgh in on a good thing. Our butchers cut neat squares of fresh pork and veal and alternate them on a skewer . . . four or five cubes to a skewer. They're easily prepared. The usual way is to dip in flour or egg and bread crumbs and brown quickly; then add a little water. Cover the pan and simmer slowly until well done. Economical because there's no waste.

Butterfly Pork Chops . . . . . lb. 35c
Cut from the loin end and the bone removed. No waste!

Fresh Whitefish . . . lb. 19c

WINTER CAMPS FOR HOMELESS MEN FAVORED

More than 30,000 homeless boys and men, nearly all under 45 years, moved through Pittsburgh seeking a shelter during the last nine months.

Part of the army of 200,000 to 500,000 homeless men in the nation, these itinerants were registered at the Central Application Bureau for Homeless Men, headed by A. W. Grotesund, at 211 Wood street.

Thousands of others came through but didn't register.

TRAINING URGED

Grotesund is an advocate of concentration camps under the direction of national guard units, where these men could be rehabilitated and protected for the winter.

He said:

"If camps could be worked out, so that the men could be sheltered and given military and vocational training, it would be great for them and the country."

Such camps, some leaders of military affairs say, would repay the federal government in furnishing a reserve military force, and save the "gypsy boys" from becoming bums or worse.

To this Adjt. Gen. David J. Davis, commander of the Pennsylvania National Guard, subscribes, but he believes such camps should be in the South, saying:

"We could only care for 2,000 men, and these, in tents, would suffer during a Pennsylvania winter.

"The place for concentration camps of that kind is down South, where it doesn't get cold. That is where the Army had its camps during the winter. There was none in the North."

DUNLAP SEES HELP

Col. W. R. Dunlap, commander of the 176th Field Artillery, believes such a plan would rehabilitate many thousands of men, and would be a good way for the government to spend welfare funds. He said:

"The government would be repaid, if the men could be given work, which they want to maintain their self-respect. But living under canvas here would be too cold, and there are few buildings to accommodate them."

Miss Fredericka Hays, director of Travelers' Aid Society here, believes the young boys should be sent home, adding:

"Each has some relative to furnish him a home. These boys under 20 should not be traveling. Sending them home would aid many older men."

LEGION WOMEN TO GIVE BRIDGE

The second of a series of benefit bridge parties will be given by American Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 5 at the home of Mrs. T. F. Ryan, 6214 Hampton street, Thursday, at 1 p. m. Proceeds will be used in welfare work of the unit.

A spaghetti dinner will be served members and friends at the next regular meeting, November 17, in the East Liberty Y. M. C. A.

New officers include Mrs. T. F. Ryan, president; Mrs. Joseph McC. Reed, vice president; Mrs. A. L. Linderman, secretary; Mrs. Chester Clark, corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. F. Clark, chaplain; Mrs. S. E. Wakely, sergeant-at-arms, and Mrs. Henry Dunmire, historian. The executive committee includes Mrs. Robert S. Cain, Mrs. Edward Crump, Mrs. Charles F. Schisano and Mrs. Joseph Langfitt.

THE TIME TO KILL A COLD

—is in the First Stage, While it is Yet a "Dry" Cold!

Now it is known that a cold ordinarily passes through three stages. The first is the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours. The second is the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days. The third, the Mucous Secretion stage. Treated in the first stage, a cold is far easier to kill. As a matter of fact, when a cold passes into the second and third stages it is apt to become settled in the system and dangerous.

Nip a cold in the bud by taking Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine as soon as you feel the first symptoms. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine doesn't merely coddle a cold—it kills it because it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels—kills the cold germs, infection and fever in the system—relieves the headache and grippy feeling—tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

Effective as it is, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is absolutely safe to take. It contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. Does not upset the stomach or make the head ring. For years this famous tablet has been the relief of thousands in all cases of colds and grippe. Take no chances with a cold so long as this dependable remedy is available. Get Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine at any drug store in America. Comes in convenient, pocket-size box, celiophane-wrapped. No reliable dealer will try to sell you a substitute.

Presentation of

Fur Fashions

Our Fur Salon, converted into a miniature auditorium, is presenting, with living models, the most unusual fur exhibit that Pittsburgh has ever seen. A priceless collection has been assembled, through the co-operation of one of our leading manufacturers, whose stocks have been supplemented by our own. Including antiques dating back to 1860, and the latest fashions for the present winter season, featuring street, afternoon and evening wraps of precious sable, chinchilla, ermine, mink, caracul and broadtail.

The exhibit continues through tomorrow, with a showing at 2:30 P. M.

New and Adaptable Ideas in the

Irwin Galleries and the Continental Shops

More of the fine furniture—designed and made by contemporary artists in the field of decoration—that captivated our customers with the opening of the Irwin Rooms, makes its appearance in the Irwin Galleries.

And in the Continental Shop—a quaint setting for the provincial type of furniture, inspired by French and Nordic pieces from the 17th Century—there is grouped furniture that's more youthful, more colorful, more adaptable than anything you've ever seen. And every piece has that home-like, informal quality that is so vital to furnishings for the small home or apartment. Mr. Ernest R. Cooper, one of the designers of this exhibit, will be here tomorrow to meet and discuss modern design and decoration with those interested.

Listening In

Songs With Character.
Philosopher Cantor.
Barking Dogs.

Songs and singers with character is the new theme of Leo Reisman's presentations. Lee Wiley, the American blues singer, and Greta Keller, Viennese singing star, were chosen to represent two kinds of love—the realistic and the romantic . . . and the tunes they offer and their styles of warbling are carefully chosen in order to be in character . . . Eddie Cantor, back on the air with Rubinoff, is basing his new radio series on the idea that listeners aren't looking for mere jokes—they want laughs with an underlying philosophy, some continuity and character . . . When an NBC dramatic script calls for a hound dog's wail, either Ray Kelly or Ed Whitney invariably is pressed into service . . . but when it comes to reproducing the yapping of a small dog, Jolly Bill Steinke takes the honors.

Mr. Steinke

Albert Payson Terhune comes forth with the info that people who believe their dogs understand everything they say are all wrong. The average smart dog, according to Mr. Terhune, who should know, has the mentality of a 4-year-old child and understands only those words which a child of that age would.

Lowell Patton, the organist, once played the piano in an orchestra with George Olsen in Portland, Ore., their home town. . . Margaret Speaks, Hummingbirds soprano, is the daughter of Oley Speaks, the composer. . Bill Hall recently completed an engagement at the New York Palace—just a few doors down the street from a theater where he once was doorman.

Like Ed Wynn, Jack Pearl says he puts on a better show when he feels he looks funny, so-o-o-o the Baron Munchausen's costume is one of his program's most important factors.

Harvey Firestone Broadcasts Hoover Plea; Baker, Glass On Air for Roosevelt

With election day just a week away, four political addresses are listed on Pittsburgh stations tonight.

Harvey Firestone, Sr., tire manufacturer and friend of Henry Ford, speaks in behalf of the candidacy of President Hoover during a broadcast originating in Detroit and heard over an extensive NBC network, including WCAE, tonight at 8:30. The broadcast is sponsored by the Republican Radio League.

Mr. Firestone

The first of a series of addresses by former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker under the auspices of the Democratic National Campaign Committee is scheduled on CBS and WJAS from 9:30 to 10:15 tonight. The address is broadcast from Brooklyn, N. Y. Immediately following, Carter Glass, United States Senator from Virginia, makes a Democratic campaign speech from Washington at 10:15 on WJAS.

The agricultural policies of the Republican administration is the topic of an address by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, at a special meeting of farmers in Mount Vernon, O., broadcast over KDKA at 7:30 tonight.

Fannie Hurst, noted American novelist, gives the last of a series of three "Get-Out-the-Vote" radio talks over CBS-WJAS at 4:30 today. Miss Hurst has been prominently identified with independent political movements. On Thursday night at 10 over the same facilities, she is listed to give a Democratic campaign address.

Program Pointers

Diminutive Ann Leaf, popular Columbia organist, is interviewed at the console of the Paramount Theater organ when she appears as guest on Bob Taplinger's "Meet the Artist" presentation on WJAS today at 5 o'clock. Ann's 24 years old, 4 feet 11 inches tall and hails from Omaha, Neb. . . . Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit offer an all-request program on WCAE at 8 tonoght. Included among the selections are "The Girl With a Brogue," "The Gay Cabellero," "Return of Barnacle Bill" and "Same Sort of Boy."

Miss Leaf

Prof. Charles E. Merriam, of the University of Chicago and author of numerous books on political subjects, discusses "Why Vote?" during the You and Your Government broadcast on KDKA at 8 tonight.

"The Shasta Limited," the second in a series of dramatizations of famous Federal criminal cases, is a highlight of the cigaret dance hour on WCAE at 10. Hal Kemp provides the rhythms.

The KDKA Players, under the direction of Claude Morris, inaugurate a new 30 p. m. Tuesday schedule tonight with "The End of the Trail," a melodrama of the early days of the West.

Georgie Price offers his impression of Vesta Victoria singing "Waiting at the Church" as a feature of his quarter-hour broadcast at 7:45 on WJAS.

Colorful and descriptive symphonic music by Howard Barlow and the Columbia Symphony Orchestra is listed on WJAS at 11. Included on the program are the Overture Miniature from Tschaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite," "Im Kloster," by Borodin, and Debussy's "Arabesque No. 2."

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen discusses "The Sleepless Child" on KDKA at 8:30.

"For the Love of a Lady," an old English tune reported as a possible rival to the jolly old King's Horses, is played by Ben Bernie and all the lads on WCAE at 9.

Leon Golfer, one of America's outstanding guitarists, is heard in a recital of his own compositions on WJAS today at 4:45.

Harry W. Shepard, secretary of the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, gives a brief talk from the studios of WWSW at 9:15 tonight. On KQV at 9, Dr. Albert G. Curry, director of Goodwill Industries, speaks on relief.

Miss Helen V. Stevens, executive secretary of the Public Health Nursing Association, speaks in behalf of the Welfare Fund on WWSW at 8:20.

Tomorrow brings: the debut of "The Romantic Bachelor," baritone shrouded in mystery and reminiscing of love and adventure in song and narrative, on WCAE at 11:30 a. m. . . the return of "The Fitch Professor," starring Helen Mors, platinum-haired torch singer and the Three Brothers, a male trio, on WJAS at 11:30 a. m. . . the third of a series of educational programs under the auspices of the Board of Public Education of the Pittsburgh schools, presented by the A. Capella Choir of the Peabody High School on KVQ at 1 . . . and a special program commemorating the birth of Daniel Boone with Daniel Carter Beard, 82-year-old national commander of the Boy Scouts of America, as principal speaker, on WJAS at 3:45.

'Globe-Trotter' On WCAE, WJAS

Speaking direct from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, flashes the latest news to tri-state listeners via WCAE and WJAS four times daily. He goes on the air at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

George Seibel, dramatic and literary critic of the Sun-Telegraph, interviews Clayton Hamilton, well-known speaker on the drama, as a highlight of his weekly "Plays and Players" broadcast from the studios of WCAE tonight at 7 o'clock.

Uncle Bob and Betty take WCAE dialers on another mythical tour of the land of comic page characters when they read the Sun-Telegraph "funnies" on WCAE at 6 tonight.

LAWYERS URGE SUPPORT FOR JUDGES

Support for Republican judicial candidates for the Supreme and Superior courts is urged in a statement issued by a Pennsylvania Lawyer's Committee, of which former Chief Justice Robert von Moschzisker is chairman, with George J. Campbell, of Pittsburgh, and A. Carson Simpson, of Philadelphia, secretaries. The candidates are Justice William B. Linn for the Supreme Court, and Judges Joseph Stadtfeld, William M. Parker and former Lieut. Gov. Arthur James for the Superior Court.

Friends of the Republican candidates are fearful that, should there be an overwhelming trend to the Democratic presidential candidate, Franklin D. Roosevelt, straight ticket voting might result which would jeopardize the sitting judges and James.

FRIENDS ACTIVE

Friends of Stadtfeld are particularly anxious that sentiment be aroused in his behalf, remembering that over-confidence resulted in his defeat when he was a Common Pleas Court candidate in the county primary.

The statement of the lawyers' committee follows:

"Justice William B. Linn, now upon the bench of the Supreme Court, served for some 13 years as a judge of the Superior Court.

"Judge Joseph Stadtfeld was a judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County when appointed to the bench of the Superior Court October 30, 1931.

"Judge William J. Parker, after a considerable period of service on the Court of Common Pleas of Venango County, has been on the bench of the Superior Court since February 23, 1932.

GENERAL SUPPORT

"All of these men are candidates on the Republican ticket, because politically they happen to be allied with that party; but, irrespective of politics, their past service entitles them to general support.

"More than this, however, the judicial branch of the government would be weakened should any of these experienced judges be defeated by other men, no matter how excellent in character, who lack the proficiency which comes from long service on the bench.

"While the other Republican candidate for the fourth place, the Hon. Arthur H. James, has not heretofore served in any judicial position, he is a lawyer of experience and good standing, who for four years occupied the office of Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania and who is thoroughly familiar with public affairs. Mr. James deserves support."

Cipher Fans, Here's New Puzzler

Here's Cipher No. 2—Easy One

Here's Cipher No. 2 of the Sun-Telegraph series. This is an easy one—just for practice. And a hint—it takes two alphabets:

Hfs dtz ijhnumjw ymnx rjxxfij? Nk xt, dtz fwj uwjyyd xfwy. Bfyhm ktw f mfwijw tsj xtts.

They laughed when you sat down at the desk—but how they gasped when you really did solve the Sun-Telegraph's Cipher No. 1 yesterday.

Dozens said it was easy, so today the Cipher Editor takes you up a step to a puzzle just a wee bit harder.

Of course, there were some who said the cipher printed yesterday was too difficult. The Cipher Editor can't offer them much consolation. But the solution to yesterday's cipher, printed today, should show them how it's done and that it isn't hard.

Study Cipher No. 1 a bit before you start on today's headache. Then buckle down, put the cat out, turn off the radio and you'll have it in an hour or so. The solution will appear in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph.

Watch the Sun-Telegraph for these puzzles every day and keep your score. They'll get easy with practice—maybe.

Here's Solution Of Cipher No. 1

This is a "Rectangular" cipher. There are 42 letters. Simply arrange them in rectangular form, six across and seven down. Read down and you have the Bachelor's Axiom:

GLASSFORD HAMPERED IN KEEPING B. E. F. PEACEFUL

FORCED TO LEAD BOTH POLICE AND VETS; FED HUNGRY MEN

By BRIG. GEN. PELHAM D. GLASSFORD
Former Chief of Police of the District of Columbia.
(Copyright, 1932, by the Washington Herald and Universal Service, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Nothing could have been more conflicting and contradictory than the dual role I assumed as a consequence of the B. E. F. invasion of Washington. I became at once the commander-in-chief of two opposing armies—the Washington Police Force and the Bonus Expeditionary Force.

They were friendly enemies, to be sure, but foes nevertheless. Their objectives were diametrically opposite. Yet for nine weeks while a bloodless battle raged, I occupied this unique and anomolous position. It had its amusing aspects, but it was the most difficult role of my experience.

My foster army, the B. E. F., was obedient, tractable and loyal—up to a certain point. But that point was precisely my main objective—to send this army home, or at least, out of Washington, as quickly and peacefully as possible. The only command that I could give that would not be obeyed was "retreat."

Won B. E. F. Support

With limited funds and an appalling lack of equipment, I did all in my power for this unwelcome command. I fed them, sheltered them, amused them and kept them as busy as possible under the circumstances. In return, this strangest army ever assembled under any flag gave me unswerving support. It found the forces of lawlessness, sedition and the Reds and helped me maintain order. I could march it up the hill, but it refused to march down again.

While directing the attack of my official army, the police, against my foster army, I was forced to be on the alert constantly to ward off flank assaults from the District of Columbia Commissioners, snipers in Congress and the "big guns" of the administration. I propose to tell just what some gentlemen did or refused to do to multiply the problems and make the task more difficult.

The first contingent of the B. E. F. arrived on May 26. Some 400 veterans were assembled and quartered in a vacant warehouse at Twelfth and D streets, S. W. That evening they held a meeting in Judiciary square.

Destitute, but Loyal

In order to get a clear idea of the quality and condition of the men I was to deal with and control to protect the lives, the health and the property of the District residents, I went to the meeting. I sat on the grass and listened to the speeches. Each speaker dwelt upon the veterans' devotion to duty, honor, patriotism and they adopted resolutions to observe their country's laws and to preserve its institutions. I found them to be, as they claimed, ex-soldiers, jobless, destitute, but loyal citizens.

Though not in uniform, I was recognized and called upon to speak. I complimented their fine spirit, but warned them that as chief of police it was my duty strictly to enforce the law. I pledged my assistance in caring for their needs while they remained in the city.

Promptly, one of the veterans, I. C. Schooler, from somewhere in the South, moved to elect me treasurer. In accepting this task I felt I could best fulfill my duty to the public if I were also in their councils and knew what was going on inside of their movement.

I went into their camp as the head of a force of "friendly enemies;" I left an official in the enemy's army. My staff in that capacity was composed of five policemen, all ex-service men, who did a splendid job of administration, feeding and housing the B. E. F.

Military Order

The camps created for the B. E. F. were organized along military lines. A form of military discipline was voted into effect by the men, camp commanders were named and a military police organized. Even Camp Marks, on Anacostia Flats, the most picturesque and motely of the lot, had a semblance of military order about it.

Every effort was made by the B. E. F. to keep all but bona fide veterans out of the camps. They realized this was essential as a popular movement of this kind was bound to attract hoboes, hoodlums and other undesirable characters.

The elimination of impostors was built around the mess. A meal could not be obtained at any B. E. F. mess unless the individual held an official meal ticket. A meal ticket was issued by the central registration office after a careful investigation of a man's discharge certificate and other credentials.

In addition to this registration the military police and plainclothesmen under my direction further aided in eliminating undesirables. I had no intention of allowing bums and criminals to use the B. E. F. as an excuse to gather in Washington. They were treated as barnacles upon a good ship and promptly scraped off.

Criminal, Red Ban

This careful scrutiny of the camp personnel, the constant vigilance of both the B. E. F. and district combined to make impossible the presence of the aggregation of criminals, Communists and non-veterans which President Hoover declared the B. E. F. to be, at the time of the eviction.

All the details of the organization would require more space than I am allotted here, but suffice it to say that every man, woman and child was put under shelter of some sort and fed after a fashion, even when the daily ration was cut to 6 cents a day.

It was my plan to place most of the veterans in camps across the Anacostia River, in the southeast section of the city. I realized that the drawbridges might prove of strategical value should trouble occur. Two excellent sites were located; one was Anacostia Park, the other a 30-acre tract near the District line, obtained from the Hon. John Bartlett, former Governor of New Hampshire, and later Assistant Postmaster General.

At first the food problem was solved by the Volunteers of America. This organization gave the early arrivals cabbage soup, bread and coffee for a couple of days. But funds were absolutely essential to organize efficiently the problem of subsistence.

Raise Funds for Food

The church people and the sporting fraternity alike contributed. More than $2,500 was collected at a free boxing bout at the baseball park. A midnight benefit show netted $500. A collection at a wrestling match, with the heavyweight champion, Jim Londos, as the star attraction, gave us $135 more. Contributions came in from all parts of the country. As treasurer I handled more than $15,000 in B. E. F. funds.

After the first fears and uncertainty and resentment of the people of Washington had passed, there came a flood of sympathy for these homeless, destitute men, such as I had not witnessed since the World War days. Churches took up collections and children set up soft drink stands and penny shows for the benefit of the veterans. It was all very pathetic and appealing.

The need of a leader among the veterans was supplied by the arrival of the widely-heralded Oregon contingent of 286 men, who had trekked 3,500 miles across the continent under Walter W. Waters, of Portland. Because of his success in handling this march the commandership was offered to Waters, and he accepted.

Waters' reign was stormy. Twice he resigned and twice he was reinstated, finally with supreme power. Simple and sincere, Waters above all was a showman. His appearance and flare for publicity captured the imagination of the B. E. F. When I needed his co-operation most Waters failed me, but he was a tower of strength and an able ally during most of the occupation.

D. C. Refuses Aid

Before we had acquired any funds, Senator Costigan, of Colorado, introduced a bill to appropriate $75,000 to care for the veterans, the Commissioners opposed it, saying:

"It will operate to bring more and more unemployed veterans to Washington."

The Commissioners were harassed by Congressmen who wanted the veterans evicted promptly. In turn, they harassed me. While I did not appreciate the criticism of the Congressmen, I could see their viewpoint. Droves of veterans daily invaded the Capitol and the Congressional Office Buildings. The members of Congress were "on the spot." They did not like it and I do not blame them particularly.

One day, in the midst of trying to solve vexing problems, I was called to the Commissioners' office and berated by Representative William P. Holaday, of Illinois, and Representative Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, for "doing everything to encourage the veterans to remain."

On another occasion, Representative Robert G. Simmons, of Nebraska, accused me of "playing the fool" and acting without judgment or vision. Representative Will R. Wood, of Indiana, was a constant complainer to the Commissioners. He never bothered me in person, but from reliable sources I learned that he was leaving no stone unturned to oust me from office.

Congressmen Call

There was another angle of congressional interference. Members who had constituents from their home towns and districts called me by phone daily, saying:

"My boys are living in an old dilapidated building with no plumbing. Can't you get them a better place to live? My boys had no sugar for their coffee this morning and no bread for supper last night. Can't you fix them up a little better than that?"

At intervals I was summoned to the office of Gen. Crosby, Commissioner in charge of police, who told me I was violating my oath of office by failing to enforce District ordinances which prohibited people from camping more than 24 hours where sewerage was not available.

When more tents were needed I obtained them from the district National Guard. For this I was reprimanded next day by Gen. Crosby. But the men were here and the only humane thing to do, as I saw it, was to put them under shelter. Once or twice the Commissioners drove to the vicinity of the camps, but they refused to talk with the men, as I suggested, to gain a better understanding of the situation.

Between the Congressmen, Commissioners and Communists during the occupation of the B. E. F. my life was lived from hour to hour, and most of my days merged into one another. I shall have something more to say about the Communists in my next article.

This is the third of a series of articles by Gen. Glassford. The fourth will appear tomorrow.

NOW SINGS A SONG ON WASHDAY! — by C.A.Voight

I'D LOVE TO GO WITH YOU GIRLS—BUT MY BACK'S JUST BROKEN. I SCRUBBED CLOTHES ALL MORNING
TOO BAD
THAT'S A SHAME
HELEN IS SO UP-TO-DATE IN OTHER THINGS, I WONDER WHY SHE STILL SCRUBS
MAYBE SHE DOESN'T KNOW ABOUT RINSO
DON'T BE FOOLISH! EVERYONE KNOWS THAT RINSO SOAKS OUT DIRT
WELL, IF HELEN USED RINSO, THE WAY WE DO, SHE WOULDN'T BE ALL TIRED OUT ON WASHDAY. I'M GOING TO SPEAK TO HER ABOUT IT
NEXT WASHDAY
LOOK, MOTHER. A FRIEND OF MINE INSISTED THAT I TRY THIS SOAP—RINSO. I NEVER SAW SUCH THICK, SOAPY SUDS
THE DIRT SOAKS RIGHT OUT, DOESN'T IT?
THAT EVENING
YOU'VE BEEN HUMMING ALL EVENING, DEAR—WHAT MAKES YOU SO HAPPY
I'VE SAID GOODBYE TO SCRUBBING AND BOILING. I GET SNOW-WHITE WASHES EASILY NOW, WITH RINSO AND HOW THAT SAVES MY HANDS!

"It's more economical," says Mrs. Nettie Miller of Erie, Pa.

"RINSO washes the clothes so clean—easily—that it seems a miracle. And it's so economical. With one big box of Rinso I washed:

1 bureau scarf, 9 doilies, 8 face cloths, 8 pillow cases, 1 table-cloth, 25 towels, 82 handkerchiefs, 17 pieces underwear, 1 child's nightclothes, 3 pairs children's stockings, 1 piece child's underwear, 2 nightshirts, 1 overalls, 5 pajamas, 11 shirts, 16 pairs socks, 6 aprons, 4 nightgowns

"There was plenty of Rinso left in the box to do my dishes 22 times, clean the sinks and tubs 5 times, mop up my floors 3 times and wash down the woodwork."

Women tell us in letter after letter how thick and lasting Rinso suds are—even in hardest water. Great in washers. Wonderful for dishes—and all cleaning. Get the BIG box.

Understanding and Tolerance Greater Than Tidiness

Remember when you were a kid, running around in dizzy circles, driving the old folks crazy with your messing and muddling?

Perhaps that wasn't so long ago. Maybe only a year or two. But now you can laugh at it, can't you? Now you know it was only a part of being young.

If only some mothers could realize that! But they can't. Here's Mother Rudge, for instance—Mother Rudge, who is all in a fret over 13-year-old Lil, who "never picks anything up;" who leaves her room upside down; who can't remember to wear a hat when she races over to Peggy's, next door!

Poor Mother Rudge! Poor little Lil! What a lot of fuss, when there might be such a lot of fun!

Are you a mother like that? If you are, here's your chance to get wise.

"Dear Sally—

"I wonder if you can help me. I am simply at my wits' ends, and nearly distracted. I don't know what to do.

"It is my little daughter, Lillian. She is 13 now, and she certainly is a trial.

"I have always been neat and clean, and I have tried to bring her up to be the same way. I thought I had, but lately I simply don't know what to make of her. She doesn't seem to have the responsibility of a grasshopper. I will send her to the store for groceries and she will come back with half of them missing, unless I give her a written list. She'll look at me and say, 'Oh, Mamma! I forgot!' as if that excused her.

"And as for her personal ways, they're simply impossible. She is so sloppy that she gives me the shudders. She will rush off to school with her clothes strewed all over her room. She will be half way through drying the dishes and suddenly see her chum, Peggy, coming home next door, and dash out to see her a minute. That stretches into an hour, if I don't yell at her.

PUNISHMENT USELESS

"She is beginning to use face powder, and half the time that is strewed all over her bureau, not to mention being put on her face so it shows like a headlight.

"And lately she's taken to refusing to wear a hat. She flashes around like a perfect nitwit, with her face getting the color of an Indian's. She's always coming home with a tear in her dress or a hole in her stocking, and she always wants to wear her best ones, even if she won't take time to wash her ears unless I make her.

"What on earth ails her? Have I wasted all my careful training?

"I just don't know what to make of her, or how I am going to stand her. I have talked to her. I have scolded her. I have even punished her. But she just gets sullen, and doesn't change a particle.

"Please help me.

"EDNA RUDGE."

What ails her?

Nothing in the world but life, lady. And a little life—warm, loving, lively life—wouldn't hurt you, my dear. It would help you to find beauty and delight of which you have never dreamed.

GREATER THINGS

You say you were always neat. Then I'm sorry for you. A little neatness, a healthy sense of order—these are good things. But there are infinitely more important things in life. There are greater things than keeping a bureau drawer in order.

Love is a greater thing. Understanding and humor, curiosity and imagination, tolerance and balance—these are all greater things than mere tidiness. And your little girl is learning these things now, as she rushes back and forth, with the wind blowing through her young hair and life bubbling through her young heart.

Take off your own hat, lady! Get away from your dust cloth and your pin cushions and your pee-wee notions. Get out into the sunshine. Meet people. Meet life. Meet glorious, glowing, disorderly, untidy life—and see the magnificence of the plan that lies behind that seeming disorder.

Stop being a vacuum cleaner, and get human!

Forget you're a mother, and let your little girl be your teacher. She'll be willing to tidy up that rigid heart and mind.

And will you both be happier? You'll be surprised!

Girls, Impress Beau's Mother With Your Worth—Fay King

By FAY KING

No girl will ever understand and appreciate the critical attitude of her best beau's mother toward her until she in turn becomes critically concerned in her own son's best girl.

Every good mother wants to see her son happily married and settled in his own home with the right girl.

She is inclined to doubt the best girl at first, but will heartily approve of her later on.

A girl should try to impress his mother with her true worth.

Many a girl is misjudged by a boy's mother for keeping him out too late, however innocently.

Send him home earlier and you can convince his mother that you have his best interests at heart, for he needs proper rest to succeed.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Beware the Poison That Lurks in Various Gases

During the fall and winter months, accidents due to gas poisoning are all too common. The first measure to be taken in its prevention is to inspect coal and gas stoves, gas tubing, gas jets and flues for defects. Most of these accidents are due to negligence and are positively preventable.

Dr. Copeland

The dangerous carbon monoxide, a deadly poison, is found in natural gas, coal gas, illuminating gas, and in the exhaust of gasoline motors. When such gases are inhaled, the carbon monoxide combines with the blood and produces dangerous changes within the body.

The greatest danger attached to gas poisoning is due to the rapidity of its effect. The victim usually inhales the gas during sleep and is not aware of his plight. His sleep is made all the deeper by the action of the gas, and unless energetic measures are taken the victim never awakens.

Former methods of treatment failed to revive the victims, but during the World War a great deal was learned about gas poisoning. Though the treatment should be left to the physician, everyone should be familiar with first aid measures, for often the physician is delayed. Until he arrives, much harm can be prevented by proper and immediate treatment.

While waiting for the physician, see that the patient receives plenty of fresh air. Do not move the patient, as walking or any other exertion may permanently damage his heart. Keep the victim warm with blankets, and place hot water bags to the feet.

Artificial respiration is necessary in cases where breathing is difficult. In severe cases, inhalation of oxygen and carbon dioxide are necessary to save life. Oxygen alone is of value, but best results are obtained by alternating the oxygen with carbon dioxide.

Mild cases of gas poisoning have such symptoms as dizziness, headache, noises in the ears, throbbing at the temple, nausea and vomiting. These symptoms precede a sleepy feeling, which in turn is followed by deep sleep. These cases require the same careful attention that is given in the more serious form.

I want to warn all my readers of the great dangers associated with gas poisoning. Repair all leaks in gas pipes, gas jets, imperfect flues and old stoves. Avoid burning gas jets during the night. Never run your automobile motor in a closed garage, but make sure that doors and windows are wide open while the motor is running.

Soak salt fish in sour milk and the delicate flavor will be brought out.

To preserve the color of linen drop a few pieces of camphor gum in the drawer in which it is stored.

When putting up curtains that are not put on rods, do not use tape, but try using hat elastic. This pulls the curtains tighter and makes them hang more evenly.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

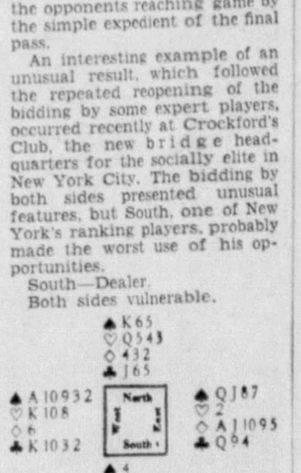
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Reopening the Bidding

Volumes have been written, without perhaps shedding much light upon the question as to under what circumstances the bidding should be reopened when a player can close it short of the opponents reaching game by the simple expedient of the final pass.

An interesting example of an unusual result, which followed the repeated reopening of the bidding by some expert players, occurred recently at Crockford's Club, the new bridge headquarters for the socially elite in New York City. The bidding by both sides presented unusual features, but South, one of New York's ranking players, probably made the worst use of his opportunities.

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡ (1)	Pass (2)	1 NT	2 ◇ (3)
Double (4)	2 ♠ (5)	Pass	Pass (6)
3 ♡ (7)	Pass	Pass	3 ♠ (8)
Pass	4 ♠ (9)	Pass	Pass
Double (10)	Pass	Pass

1—A sound Opening bid.

2—West's trump suit is so weak that it makes doubtful the wisdom of a vulnerable Overcall.

3—East correctly places North with only slight strength, and decides that no particular damage can come from an Overcall.

4—South's first error. While his hand is above the average strength, his partner's response has not been such as to preclude the possibility of West holding a fair hand.

5—West reasons that this contract will certainly be much better than the doubled diamond contract, for which he lacks trump support. This is not a rescue bid, but is made because West has a borderline Overcall and East's bid suggests the possibility of some sort of fit in spades.

6—East decides to wait and see.

7—South could have advantageously closed the bidding by passing at this point.

8—East now decides to give his partner a chance. The further bidding has disclosed that North's hand must be very weak.

9—West reasons that East must have fine spade support, otherwise he would permit the bidding to die at three hearts. At worst, West figures that the contract may be defeated 1 trick and he elects to risk a penalty of 200 points for the chance of making a vulnerable game.

10. South's Double is a matter of self-respect. He has forced his opponents to bid for game and feels that their bidding has shown great doubt in their minds as to the making of it.

In the play, North opened the heart 3, which was won with the Ace by South, and a trump returned, which North's King was permitted to make. Now North mistakenly shifted to a club, leading the Knave, and, of course, any doubts there might have been about West making the contract were at once resolved. The contract could, at all times, have been made, but the play by North facilitated it.

TODAY'S QUESTION

On the first hand of a session the Declarer was set 3 tricks, doubled, but on the third hand that pack was proved to be imperfect—two cards missing. Should the first hand be replayed?

Answer—The third hand is void, and there must be a new deal with a correct pack. However, the previous score on the first hand stands.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Right on top is the black and white turban. A lovely model is half of black broadtail and half of ermine velvet. It is joined and held at the side by a small metal ornament.

The initial step to a smart bag is a frame so made that large silver or metal initials can be slotted on. A black suede bag has this type frame and uses enormous mat silver letters.

A double portion of smartness is given a new coat through the use of two different furs for trimming. The coat is of brown woolen flecked with reddish brown. There is a high standing collar of brown astrakan which comes to a deep point in back. This collar is attached by two skins of light beige ermine. There is a muff of the brown astrakan. The upper sleeve is full and marked by rows of stitching in brown.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Use of the Fork

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I enjoy fried eggs in the privacy of my own home because I can dip my bread in the yolk. In company I do not think this is the proper thing to do. Must I cut it and watch the appetizing yellow flow all over the plate?

2—Are all sidedishes eaten with the fork, such as peas, corn, cole slaw . . . what other sidedishes are there? Corn on the cob . . . is it eaten as a vegetable with the meat course, and how?

3—When individual butter plates with the individual butter knife are served, what is one to do?

4—Is it bad etiquette to use the bread as an aid to a fork? I think it looks all right.

5—Is the fork given the preference to the knife in cutting soft food? Example, egg plant, tomato, boiled potato and so forth? O.

1—A real problem, this . . . how to enjoy the "appetizing yellow" of a fried egg, and still be considered a "careful eater." And there is no reason why we shouldn't do both . . . If we don't let our fingers touch the pieces of bread, but instead put a small piece of bread (and follow it with another and another, if we wish) on the plate and use our fork, or better our knife and fork, carefully to dip the piece in the yolk and capture the yolk in this way.

Using our fingers to "dip up" the yolk with the piece of bread won't do, for it just can't be done carefully or attractively. But carefully placing a piece of bread on the plate, and carefully gathering up the yolk on it, using the fork in the left hand and the knife in the right, as a most necessary aid to the fork . . . this will do the trick, and again the yolk enjoyment.

2—Yes, we should eat all sidedishes with the fork. As a matter of fact, sidedishes aren't much "done" nowadays, for it is much better form to have almost all kinds of food accessories served directly onto the luncheon or dinner plate.

Corn on the cob and artichokes are the two notable exceptions to this. I have always served these vegetables as a separate course . . . they deserve it . . . as a vegetable entree. Then we can give them all of our attention, and they deserve this too! If corn on the cob or artichokes aren't served as a vegetable entree (before the dinner course) or, in fact as the course after the dinner course, in place of a salad course, then a separate plate should be placed for them beside the dinner plate.

First, unless the cob is a very small one, we should break the cob in two, holding it with our napkin. Then we spread a small area with the accompaniments we wish . . . butter, salt, pepper . . . and eat this before we prepare the next small area. This, as much as possibly can be done, avoids dripping. As we eat the corn, we hold the cob with only one hand.

3—We use the bread and butter plate to place our roll or bread, olives, celery, radishes, pickles. And we use the individual butter knife to butter our roll or bread, to butter the crackers served with the soup course, the toast or crackers served with the salad course. This plate is removed when the table is crumbed after the salad course, to prepare the table for the service of the dessert.

4—No, it really is correct, if we wish, to use the famous "crust of bread" as an aid to the fork. But it is so much better to used the knife as an aid to the fork.

5—This depends. That is, if we are accustomed to use our fork alone, we naturally use it for this kind of food. But if we are accustomed to using the non-fork-shifting method of eating, we use both the knife and fork when we eat practically all kinds of foods.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

To whiten tanned arms, massage with cold cream vigorously. While the emollient remains upon the skin surface pat in almond meal; wrap the arms in Turkish towels that have been wrung out of steaming hot water. Wunnerful! Just like new.

Scalp hygiene is what keeps the hair in good condition; it is the source of hirsute beauty. As hair lives on the blood supply, and as friction stimulates circulation, give the old dome-top a rousing clawing for three or four minutes every night. If a tonic is used, part the hair at various places and trickle it on with a medicine dropper. A more economical method than plying a pledget absorbent cotton.

We're still hearing about the revival of the wind blown and its new variations, but somehow it doesn't suit the sassy millinery of the present season. Smart coiffures reveal the forward hair line; often ears are out in the open. A pretty forehead is a beauty asset that should not be curtained.

If lips are anointed with cold cream and the cream removed carefully before the lipstick is applied, the coloring substance will go on more evenly; shreddy, dry lips are an untidy exhibit. Touch inner surfaces with the pigment, be careful not to spread it beyond the edges of the lips. The rule now is to use a blue-red, or raspberry, and to be stingy with it. A heavy smear makes the mouth appear large and unattractive.

How Do Chorus Girls Manage?

The theatre knows no "sick list." Chorus girls just can't be "absent." Regardless of their monthly sickness, they must be in line, on time, on their toes, and smiling. How do they do it? Nature doesn't spare them. They stop the pain for hours at a stretch, by the use of a perfectly harmless medicine called Midol.

It acts in seven minutes. Relief is complete. The pain is gone. Midol is not a narcotic and offers no interference with nature. All druggists; ask simply for Midol.

How You Can Ease Rheumatic Pains In Few Minutes

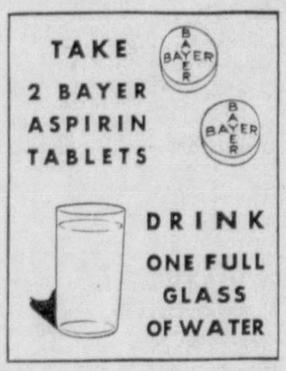
A Discovery That Brings Relief Every Day To Thousands

It has now been discovered by thousands of rheumatic sufferers that the pains of that distressing disorder can be eased in as little as a few minutes . . . relief and comfort in almost as little time as it takes to tell!

Doctors advise two tablets of Bayer-Aspirin taken with a full glass of water. Then a rest of a few minutes . . . and that is all. Pain is eased quickly—sometimes almost unbelievably.

Relief comes so fast because of the peculiar quick-dissolving property of Genuine Bayer Aspirin. The tablets you take dissolve almost INSTANTLY in your stomach. And thus you get practically instant relief. The fastest, safe relief—it is said.



Remember it is Genuine Bayer Aspirin which claims this quick-dissolving, quick-acting property. So be careful that you get the real article when you buy. See that any box or bottle you purchase is clearly marked "Genuine Bayer Aspirin." And that any tablet you take has the name "Bayer" stamped on it in the form of a cross. Then you will get quick relief.

Remember that when you buy. And remember, too, that Genuine Bayer Aspirin Does Not Harm the Heart.

More Money to Spend
More Time to Enjoy

You can have both with new Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds *

YOU'VE been paying your part of a "Colds-Tax"—in money and time alone—of over a billion dollars a year! Now, tests indicate, more than half of it can be saved and really enjoyed... Nor does this count the savings in worry and trouble of colds—especially to children.

Proved Last Winter in Extensive Clinics

Introduced last season, Vicks Colds-Control Plan was clinically tested in schools, colleges and homes — among 3,519 people. Results showed the number and duration of colds reduced by half—their costs cut more than half!..The satisfaction of hundreds of thousands of enthusiastic users—all over the country—confirms these tests.

Safe, practical and inexpensive, Vicks Plan is easy to follow—full directions in each Vicks Package. Let it bring to your home this winter the happy experience of new freedom from colds and their burdensome expense.

* Vicks Plan provides proper medication—at the proper time—for every type and stage of a cold. In Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, you have the new aid in preventing colds. With Vicks VapoRub, you have the accepted modern way of treating colds. Together with certain simple rules of health, these preparations form the new Vicks Plan for your better Control of colds.

Briefly, How Vicks Plan Works for COLDS-CONTROL

At that first feeling of stuffiness or nasal irritation—Nature's usual signal that a cold is coming on—use Vicks Nose Drops at once! They soothe irritation and aid Nature's functions in throwing off the infection that threatens. They prevent development of many colds.

If a cold has developed, VapoRub is the proved dependable treatment. Just rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime, its double action—continued throughout the night—brings quicker relief. Use of the Nose Drops during the day adds to comfort—helps shorten the cold.

TRIAL OFFER: Your druggist has Vicks Vapo-Rub (now in white Stainless form, if you prefer). Also Vicks Nose Drops and the new Vicks Cough Drop—actually medicated with ingredients of Vapo-Rub. If you wish to test these new products before buying, and learn more about Vicks Plan for better Control-of-Colds, send 3c in stamps to Vick Chemical Co., 481 Milton St., Greensboro, N. C.

URGE MISSIONS TO KEEP OUT OF POLITICS

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The laymen's foreign missions inquiry, in a section of its report just published, said missions should not "meddle in politics, least of all in the politics of a foreign country in which it is a guest."

The inquiry, financed by laymen of seven Protestant denominations, dealt in this instalment of its report with social trends and recommended that missions "should maintain, so far as possible, friendly relations with labor union leaders and Socialist or Communist leaders as well."

"They (mission) should maintain an open mind and make no official distinction between claims of capitalism, socialism or communism.

"Missions and organized Christianity should consider it their duty to stimulate thought, never to suppress it.

ESSENTIALLY CHRISTIAN

"Socialism should be better understood, especially with relation to previous social organizations in the Orient, as in many of its motives it is essentially Christian. It should be appreciated as an effort to devise a plan to cure some of the most glaring evils of the modern industrial order.

"Communism has been usually considered by missions and the Christian churches in China, India and Japan as something sinister to be fought by every means available. This feeling in large part grows out of attacks by certain kinds of Communists on Christians and on religious faith.

"The Christian often fails to distinguish Communism as a social order from the acts of violence which have so frequently characterized the attempts of its followers to overturn other systems. Communism must not be confused with banditry.

DISCRIMINATION URGED

"Careful discrimination should be made between different types of Communism, from the Russian type with its violence and anti-religious antagonists on the one hand to those milder forms which are little more than a pooling of economic resources for protection and support on the other.

"A world organization of missions with its sympathies extending to many lands should not in the view of this commission be the advocate of any particular economic order."

Discussing the mission and its political relations, the inquiry reported:

"Not every political issue is relevant to the welfare of souls, nor does the expresion of views imply alignment with political parties. But in such issues as are relevant, the postulate of the mission must be that no government can have an interest in defeating the personal development of its citizens, nor in suppressing any competent opinion on this subject."

Engineer Arrested In U. S. Check Case

Vincent James Motyl, 29, a civil engineer, said to be a former employe of the United States Engineers at Slater, Mo., was arrested yesterday in Carnegie by special agents of the United States Bureau of Investigation. The agents said Motyl is wanted in St. Louis for fraudulently representing himself to be Francis S. Tramel, an attache of the engineers' office, cashing four government checks issued to Tramel at St. Louis banks.

RALLY TONIGHT BY DEMOCRATS

The candidacy of Mrs. Anne E. Felix for Congress on the Democratic ticket, as well as all other Democratic candidates, will be supported tonight at a meeting in Peabody High School auditorium. The principal speakers will be Maj. E. Lowry Humes and Charles Alvin Jones. Paul Anderson will preside.

Mrs. Felix, campaigning in the Thirty-second District against Councilman M. J. Muldowney, is asking support on the theory that Gov. Roosevelt, if elected President, will need the support of Democratic members of Congress.

Sleuths Hunt Mule On Replevin Writ

Deputy sheriffs today were searching for a brown mule.

A writ of replevin for the animal was obtained in the Prothonotary's office by Attorney Jacob Frank, representing the Minsinger Company, directed against George Gordon, trading as the Gordon Coal Company.

Attorney Frank said Gordon was to pay $5 a month until the mule was paid for and that the agreement has not been carried out.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough. It's no trouble to mix, and costs but a trifle, yet it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water for a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, put it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your sugar syrup. The pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is the most effective remedy that money can buy. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and clears the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous as a healing agent for throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Let's talk about a wedding first of all today. For after all, what event can give that amount of romantic satisfaction we all have in the spectacle of a notable wedding.

And although the wedding we're going to talk about isn't taking place here, we're ever so interested in it, nevertheless. Miriam Clarke Mohler, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Robbins Mohler, of Washington, is to become the bride of Walter C. Carroll, Jr., of Chicago, son of the Walter C. Carrolls, of college avenue, at 5 o'clock this afternoon in St. James Chapel, Chicago.

The ceremony is to be simple, and small as so many of the marriages have been this autumn. The bride's only attendant is Mary Carroll, sister of the bridegroom, who is to wear a wine-red costume with a hat to match.

The bride is wearing a traveling costume of gray, trimmed with fur, with a hat to match. Gordon Arey, of Oak Park, Ill., was best man.

The Rev. Dr. Duncan Browne, the pastor, was the officiant. And the parents of the bridegroom were Dr. Browne's houseguests. The elder Mr. Carroll was for many years a vestryman at St. James before he returned to live in Pittsburgh.

House Guests

Those attending the ceremony in addition to the bride's and bridegroom's parents were Mrs. Edward S. Bradford, of Longmeadow, Mass., twin sister of the bridegroom; Florence Carroll, the youngest member of the Carroll family, and Marjorie Kimball.

Mary Carroll and Marjorie motored to Chicago for the ceremony; Marjorie has joined her family there. Of course you know that her parents, the G. Cook Kimballs, have gone with their Lares and Penates to Chicago.

Music-loving fashionables are anticipating an event of this evening, the opening concert of the Music Guild.

Opening Concert

Oscar E. Del Bianco and his string ensemble will appear this evening in the first of the series of six concerts to be given in Carnegie lecture hall.

The Guild is a co-operative, non-profit organization, by the way, founded to foster the best in music. And as I've mentioned before, a group of the younger smart set will usher.

Added to the list of those giving their support to the Guild is the name of Mrs. Alfred Polland Brill, a familiar figure at the concerts at Syria Mosque.

Others are Miss Susan Canfield, Mrs. Samuel Eli Elliott, Mrs. James D. Hailman, the painter; Mrs. Phoebe A. Henning, Harry M. Irons, Glendinning Keeble, Richard S. Rauh, W. A. Campbell and the Tuesday Musical Club.

The Dilworth Hall Alumnae Association is going to have an opening event, too, a bridge luncheon in the College Club, Monday afternoon.

Alumnae Bridge

Throughout the season, the association plans to give a dozen or so benefit bridges at the homes of members.

Those who'll be hostesses this month at these benefits are Mrs. J. F. McClurg, Mrs. George O. Wedd and Mrs. C. Bradley Gibson.

Literary, Musical Club Honors Mrs. Himmelrich

A tea in honor of Mrs. R. G. Himmelrich, a former president who has been in California for a year, followed yesterday's meeting of the Literary and Musical Club.

Adele Eggers Furniss presented Chinese lullabies and also songs by Mrs. Charles Morris Johnson, of Pittsburgh, and the literary portion of the program, dealing with South America, was given by Mrs. Harvey Owens, Mrs. Adele Cornell and Mrs. Ben G. Graham.

Anne Wootton's Betrothal Is Announced

Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Wright Wootton, of New York, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anne Nicholas Wootton, to Francis Betts Hillhouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hillhouse, of New York and Harwickport, Mass.

Miss Wootton is a direct descendant of Robert Carter Nicholas and Gov. George Nicholas, of Kentucky, and is a great-granddaughter of Gen. H. G. Wright, commander of the Sixth Corps during the Civil War and Chief of Engineers. Miss Wootton was graduated from Miss Chapin's School and studied abroad for two years.

Mr. Hillhouse attended Pomfret School and was graduated from Yale in 1925. He is a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity and is now with the National Aniline and Chemical Company in Kobe, Japan.

Mr. Hillhouse on his mother's side is a direct descendant of Elder William Brewster, and through his father is a great-great-grandson of Maj. John C. Ten Broeck, who was with Gen. Washington at Valley Forge, and a great-grandson of Judge Samuel Rossiter Betts of the United States District Court. He is a nephew of James Hillhouse, of Sachem's Wood, New Haven, Conn., and of Charles Betts Hillhouse, of this city. Mrs. George Channing Sumner, the former Miss Mary Hillhouse, and Mrs. Roger Shackleton Stiles, who was Miss Marian Hillhouse, are his sisters.

The wedding will take place late in November.

Debate to Be Given On Home Friday For Alliance

The debate which was heard at a recent meeting of the Wilkinsburg Woman's Club will be repeated on Thursday before the Outlook Alliance in the Congress of Clubs. Mrs. O. G. Leichliter will again uphold the affirmative on "Resolved, That the modern home is more conducive to family happiness than was the pioneer home," and Mrs. Q. W. Hershey will take the negative side.

In addition to the debate, the program will include soprano solos by Miss Lura Stover, Western Pennsylvania Atwater Kent audition winner. Mrs. J. D. Boydston will accompany her.

Arrangements are under the direction of Mrs. A. L. Fillmore and hostesses will include Mrs. J. T. C. Mitchell, Mrs. G. H. Baskerville, Mrs. J. E. Crawshaw, Mrs. R. G. Dorrance and Mrs. H. M. Derhamer.

A meeting of Alliance board members is called for Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Crime Causes Explained At Congress Quarterly

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The inadequate home and bad use of leisure time were cited by the Rev. Frank Edwin Smith as the two chief causes of crime when he addressed the quarterly meeting of the Congress of Clubs yesterday afternoon. Mr. Smith presented a more optimistic outlook on the crime situation than is usually given. He gave statistics showing that from 1917 to 1927 there had been a decrease in lesser crimes and but a slight increase in major ones. He advocated a study of the individual in crime by a board made up of lawyers, psychiatrists and doctors after the court had passed judgment on the case.

Dr. C. E. Dickey, county superintendent of schools, speaking at the morning session, outlined the proposed 10-year educational plan by which it is hoped to equalize school costs and to provide equal rights for every child in a community. The program which the educational commission will submit to the State Legislature suggests a careful estimate of property valuation, a uniform method of taxation, the rate not to exceed six mills and the state to pay the difference where the community is unable to pay the full assessment. It is also proposed that districts of less than 1,000 join with the larger districts. Dr. Dickey said out of 2,587 school districts in the state, 2,303 have a population of less than 5,000, 32 districts have no teachers and one has five directors to manage one teacher. When the plan is worked out Pennsylvania will be second to none in methodology, Dr. Dickey remarked.

Mrs. Richard B. Perry reported the State Federation, Edward O. Tabor made a stirring plea in behalf of the welfare fund drive and there was music by Robert Pritchard, baritone, with Adalaine Merrill Biddle at the piano.

Society Women Attend Theater in Spite of Halloween Events

In spite of innumerable Halloween celebrations last night, and clouded skies and rain, there were still a few faithful first nighters at the Nixon to see gay "Forward March." Among them was attractive Mrs. Charles Flaccus, in a gown of yellow lace with a black velvet wrap collared in white fox. Mrs. J. Henry O'Neil wore a simple, smart afternoon frock of black crepe with a criss-cross collar of white at the high neckline.

Mrs. Carl Borntraeger's blondeness was enhanced by a gown of black velvet with a knee-length coat of velvet and white fox. Her vivacious daughter, Rita, was there too, wearing garnet red satin with an ermine coat, and Gretchen Bickford, there with David McCargo, was in heavy white lace, with a shoulder spray of orchids adding a vivid note, and as she left the theater she was wearing a brilliant green velvet wrap with a white fox collar.

Madeline Alexander wore black chiffon and lace, and I noticed the James McKays chatting in the lobby during intermission. Mrs McKay had chosen a deep peony red crepe gown, having a wide cape of the material draped over the shoulders, tying in front, forming a diminutive jacket. And I caught a glimpse of Mary Colwell Jennings in black velvet, with a coat of ermine.

Mrs. C. E. Lott's costume was of Paddy green crepe. The Albert Horne Burchfields were there, too with Mrs. Burchfield in blue chiffon, and I noticed the Richard Gundry Jenningses among the audience.

BLACK VELVET MOST SUCCESSFUL FOR DINNER GOWNS THIS YEAR

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—The new importance of velvet, among 1933 fashions prophesied by Paris, has had much to do with the designing of dinner dresses. Because the fabric itself is so rich and luxurious, new dinner clothes are obliged to take to simpler lines, to less decorations and to silhouettes that follow the natural figure.

AMONG THE better dressmakers there seems to be an agreement that black velvet is perhaps the most successful of all, as a fabric for dresses for later afternoon and for dinner. There seems also to be a unanimous opinion that black velvet is at its best in two arrangements—without any contrasting decoration, and with trimmings of dead white.

PATOU SHOWS an example of each in today's sketches. The dress at the left, designed for afternoon wear, has the little shoulder sleeves and discreet neckline that is evident in the new bridge and dinner dresses. The sides of the neckline are marked with white lace; the front with white buttons. The skirt is undecorated, save for an incrustation at the front, which gives the effect of a yoke.

* * *

THE OTHER dress, also of black velvet, depends on cut-outs which show the flesh beneath, for its decoration. Two lozenges, cut vertically into the back, make this dress appropriate not only for dinner, but for evening affairs as well. The front is undecorated, and has a wide, high neckline.

Publicity Like Baking, Club Women Told

Mrs. Charles F. Goldthwaite's summing up of the publicity conference held yesterday in Utility Hall, under the auspices of the State Federation, was a distinctly clever contribution to the afternoon's full program. Mrs. Goldthwaite, president of the Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club, likened publicity to baking a cake and the press chairman to the cook, her official attributes to the ingredients and utensils and the newspapers to the consumers.

Mrs. John M. Phillips, first vice president of the State Federation, suggested "practice for publicity" that talent might be developed and she urged ingenious and purposeful planning of such programs as would in themselves command publicity.

Mrs. E. L. Thomssen, district publicity chairman for the Federation, called the meeting to order. The club editors of the daily newspapers spoke on assigned subjects and various phases of the question of publicity were discussed briefly by Mrs. R. B. Perry, corresponding secretary of the Federation; Mrs. Philip Benz, district radio chairman; Mrs. James G. Chalfant, district president; Mrs. Ronald L. Thompson, of Dormont New Century Club; Mrs. Elsie Breese Mitchell, Tuesday Musical Club; Mrs. Leo Shonfeld, Council of Jewish Women; Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, county publicity chairman; Mrs. E. W. Steinmetz, Crafton Woman's Club; Miss Dorothy Newmann, Y.W.C.A.; Mrs. John T. Anderson, Carrick Mothers' Club; Miss Clara Terwilliger, district junior press chairman, and Miss Catherine O'Donnell, of the Council of Catholic Women.

Club Federation To Hear Radio Talk Friday

While at luncheon on Friday in the Union Baptist Church members of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs will hear the radio talk being given at 1:30 over KDKA by Mrs. Richard J. Hamilton, State Federation president, who is to be the county federation's guest and speaker at its fall meeting in the church.

The meeting opens at 10:30 o'clock, Mrs. H. H. Parker, president of the hostess club, the Mothers' of Carrick, making the address of welcome. Instead of reports, echoes from the State Federation convention will be heard at the morning sessions. Mrs. W. J. Osborne, chairman of music, will preface the afternoon session with an organ recital and there also will be music by the Dormont New Century Club Choral. Mrs. Hamilton's address will be made at 2:30.

The executive board of the county will entertain in Mrs. Hamilton's honor at dinner in the Woman's City Club on Friday evening, guests including state officers and the executive board of the Carrick Club.

Bellevue 'Y' Auxiliary To Hear Welfare Talk

Miss Elsie Hiett is to speak on child welfare at tomorrow's luncheon meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Bellevue Y. M. C. A. Mrs. Mary Martin Lees will sing, accompanied by Mrs. J. R. MacGregor.

Models to Show Congress Diners Latest in Gowns

An innovation is to be introduced at the Congress of Clubs, Tomorrow and Friday and Monday, Wednesday and Friday of next week, from 12:30 until 2 o'clock, models will parade among the diners in the clubhouse. Moreover, on those days the dining room will be open to all affiliated club members and their friends. Fashions for all types will be displayed through the courtesy of Gimbels and Boggs and Buhl.

Too Much Food... Tobacco Last Night

Yet...This Morning No Acid Headache

THE LAW
Science says: "If you do, Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is probably the quickest and most effective way to avoid feeling its after-effects."

"Don't overindulge—don't eat too much, smoke too much, drink unwisely" is the Law of Good Health.

If you don't follow that law—Phillips' Milk of Magnesia; scientists say; is the QUICKEST, SIMPLEST AND EASIEST way to correct its effects. All you do is this:

"TAKE—2 tablespoons in a glass of water before bed."

"TAKE—2 tablespoons in a glass of water with the juice of a WHOLE ORANGE when you get up."

Or take six Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablets the same way, which give an equivalent amount of Milk of Magnesia, for each Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablet equals one teaspoonful of the liquid Milk of Magnesia.

What It Does

This small dosage of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia acts to alkalize the system. And an alkalized system is largely impervious to the bad aftereffects of excessive smoking—excessive eating, drinking.

It sweetens and purifies your stomach. Banishes the acid headache, sour stomach, deadly depression that mark the price of immoderations.

Results are quick and almost invariable. Your head clears, your stomach settles—you feel like a new person.

Every person who smokes should know this. And take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia EVERY NIGHT at bedtime. Every person who overindulges in food or drink should know it. And keep a bottle of "Phillips'" in his medicine chest.

Try it—just once. You will be amazed at what it does.

When you buy, be sure to get the REAL article—Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Always ask for it by the name Phillips—for all "milk of magnesia" is not alike in effect. So take care to see you get Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—the kind doctors endorse—judged the most powerful neutralizer of stomach acids known.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

State G. O. P. Risks Hoover to 'Get' Pinchot

By MARK SHIELDS

Few believe State Senator John J. McClure's challenge to Gov. Pinchot to declare his preference between President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt was made with any serious expectations, or wish that the Governor would reply. Certainly the Senator from Delaware County knows Pinchot will not declare for Hoover, and a declaration by the Governor for Roosevelt, together with some remarks about utilities and their friendly relations with the Republican organization well might throw Pennsylvania into the Democratic column a week from today.

Mr. Shields

The Pennsylvania state organization is playing with fire with such letters as that of McClure, if it is earnestly interested in putting Mr. Hoover across in this state, and is not first concerned in arranging things for the 1934 state campaign. McClure's close relations with the state committee leaders would entitle anyone to believe that he did not write his letter to Pinchot without some inside discussion.

Even silence from Mr. Pinchot is tantamount to an indorsement of Gov. Roosevelt. That passive attitude will be at least a little helpful to the Democratic candidate. Should he accept the McClure challenge and come into the open—as he says he will not—there are counties now uncertain which almost surely would follow the Governor as they have in the past. He would be particularly effective with the drys, who must be bewildered anyhow as they see their presidential champion panhandling in Philadelphia for votes through an appeal to William S. Vare.

Hope to Establish Record to Dog Pinchot

Mr. Vare, it will be recalled, makes his support conditional upon uncompromising witness.

What Senator McClure and the state organization really are trying to do is to establish a record against Mr. Pinchot as a party regular, a record which they hope will dog him in 1934 if he desires to run for the Senate. To do so they take dangerous risks with the fortunes of Mr. Hoover in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Pinchot seems to believe that by remaining silent he can establish himself as a regular, being able to point to no public indorsement of the Democratic candidate. But, on the other hand, he will be able to point to no effort in behalf of the Republican presidential candidate, and the man who refuses to support his party leader certainly, by implication, gives aid and comfort to the enemy.

Left to himself, Mr. Pinchot probably would declare for Roosevelt. But he is being restrained by some of his county leaders. There are wet districts which did what they could for Pinchot in the spring primary when he was backing Gen. Smedley Butler for the Republican senatorial nomination. It was hard work, and it jeopardized the hold of some of these leaders on their districts.

No Wish to Forfeit Surface Regularity

Now, they have told the Governor, to ask them openly to support a Democratic presidential candidate would be too great a strain on control for a single year. They are willing to let things take their coruse, to engage in no unusual exertion for the Republican presidential candidate, but they do not wish to forfeit their surface regularity. Further, regularity means more to some of these leaders than to Mr. Pinchot, who was only deeply concerned on the subject in 1930.

Then he turned against organization leaders who deserted him for their own slogan, "be regular." It was not effective in Philadelphia. Actually this fetish of regularity is not so important as it once was, but you can't convince politicians of that fact, wherefore the present shadow boxing between the organization and the Governor.

As a matter of honest fact, the state committee will prefer Mr.

COUNTY G. O. P. ENLISTS AID OF BUSINESS

Manufacturers Urge Big Turnout for Mosque Rally

The same manufacturers, business and financial group which sponsored a pro-Hoover luncheon in the William Penn Hotel last Friday, at which employers were instructed how to urge their employes to vote for the President, is endeavoring to stimulate interest in the Republican mass meeting at Syria Mosque Thursday night. Speakers at the meeting will include Senator David A. Reed, chief attraction at the Friday luncheon, and Congressman James M. Beck, of Philadelphia.

'BIG BUSINESS' PLEA

Letters are being mailed by the manufacturers to businessmen, extending a "cordial invitation" to attend the Mosque meeting, it being explained that this invitation is "at the suggestion of the Republican County Committee." The commitee, it is explained, wishes "a very large attendance."

This, apparently, is the purpose in enlisting the assistance of the business groups. A former Mosque rally, without the co-operation of the businessmen, was not well attended, and was a cold and listless affair for most of its duration.

COERCION CHARGED

It was at the Friday luncheon that suggestions were made for dealing with employes which Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence charged were coercion in favor of President Hoover.

Republican meetings tonight include Sewickley High School, with County Chairman William H. Coleman, Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence and Congressman Edmund F. Erk as speakers; Homewood Carnegie Library, speakers, Congressman Harry A. Estep and Clyde Kelly, Max Spann and President of Council John S. Herron; Union High School, Turtle Creek, speakers, Kelly and Attorneys Benjamin Lencher and Artemas Leslie.

3 HURT AS WIND FELLS TREES

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—High winds, whipping through this section and reaching a velocity estimated at 60 miles an hour, toppled trees and telephone poles across the road and resulted in injuries to three persons last night.

Mike Rukvina, 37, working on the construction of a tipple at Nemacolin, was blown from his perch and fell 35 feet to the pier. He rolled into the Monongahela River and was rescued by James MacFarland, another employe. Rukvina suffered fractures of the jaw and skull.

Two youths were injured as their automobile struck telephone wires hanging over the highway. They are Louis Mancini, 19, and Joseph George, 19.

The wires ripped the top from their car and the two suffered lacerations.

First Bank Robbed In Modern Turkey

ISTANBUL, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The first holdup of a bank by bandits in modern Turkey was reported today when two masked men armed with revolvers held up the staff of the Ottoman Bank at Brusa and escaped with $2,000.

INTERNATIONAL ART SHOWN AT INSTITUTE

Canvases Reminder of Earlier Era in City's Progress

By PENELOPE REDD

Today Carnegie Institute presents Pittsburgh's review of paintings from the 30 Carnegie Internationals. About 200 of the 600 international paintings owned in Pittsburgh comprise the exhibition which will continue through December 15.

Miss Redd

In 1896, at the time of the first international, the city was just beginning to grow up. The proposal to erect the 15-story Park Building was the talk of the town. The Art Society, founded some 20 years before, arranged a series of lectures on the Barbizno School as a feature to mark the exhibition's opening. In the current show is a Jules Breton, "Brittany Washerwoman," testifying to the influence of this pre-Impressionist French group upon the local collectors of 1896.

With the 1907, came tremendous interest in the spectacular gift of the fine arts galleries contributed by Mr. Carnegie. The convocation of representatives from the universities and nations of the world, was climaxed by the prize award conferred on "The Bath," painted by La Touche. Years make this old "success de scandale" appear as an innocuous, decorative pastiche. Years make one regret the obtuse collectors who were oblivious of the second prize, "Portrait of Professor Leslie Miller," by Eakins.

Although the modern movement in art had been tempering the point of view of the newer generation in France, since the advent of the twentieth century, this trend did not manifest itself in the Carnegie Internationals Indeed, the impressionists were rated by the townsfolk as disturbingly modern.

TASTES DEMONSTRATED

The purchases from the exhibitions through this period represent well the dominating elements in the annual shows. English decorative figure subjects, pictorial reports of foreign places,

"WHAT HAPPENED NEXT I'LL NEVER BE SURE OF—I RECALL A HAIRY ARM REACHING OUT FROM THE ORANG'S CAGE—THE NEXT THING I KNEW MY EYES WERE BURNING—THE COBRA HAD SPAT HIS VENOM INTO MY EYES"

CHAPTER XVII.

Ali had received instructions to equip the spitting cobra's box with a water tin. Perhaps the job was one he had no desire to tackle after seeing what the snake had done to Joe Winter's dog.

I decided to do the job myself. My first move was to get the burlap sacking which I always keep near a box of this kind. Next I secured the empty sardine tin that I would stuff under the wire as soon as I pried it open. Carefully spreading the burlap over the wire, I went to work with a pair of pliers. I moved the sacking back an inch or so to get at one of the staples, and I remember the hissing of the creature inside as I did it. What happened next I'll never be sure of. I recall a hairy arm reaching out from the orang's cage in an effort to reach the burlap. I yelled at the ape in an effort to scare him off. The next thing I knew my eyes were suddenly burning, as if they had been doused with vitriol. I was blinded. The cobra had spat his venom into my eyes.

As long as I live I shall not forget the strange and awful sensation I experienced when I suddenly found myself sightless. Never was I more thoroughly scared—and I'm not ashamed to admit it.

ESCAPE PREVENTED

Yet my first thought was not of myself, but of the cobra. Had it already escaped from the box? If not, would it find the opening I had left in the corner, and get out shortly? Almost automatically I went through the motion of sealing up the hole in the netting. Frantically feeling my way I yanked the sack back over the box and pushed a wad of the burlap into the opening. The cobra's hissing informed me that it was still inside. How could I keep that burlap in place, how could I weight it down so that the snake could not work its way out? I remembered a brick that had been lying on the floor and I reached down, fumbling for it. Finally I located it by the simple process of stumbling against it.

Having deposited the brick on top of the burlap, my next move was to find my way out of the shed without getting anywhere near the orang's cage. My eyes

5 HURT, STOLEN CAR IN CRASH

A family of five was in St. John's Hospital today with injuries suffered when their automobile was sideswiped by a stolen car in Chateau street near Blevins street last night.

The victims, suffering lacerations and bruises, were Gilbert Craig, 42, of 3233 Langfitt street; his wife and their three sons, Francis, 9; Albert, 7, and Norbert, 2. The youngest son may lose the sight of an eye, it was said at the hospital.

The car which struck the Craig machine had been stolen a short time before, police said, from Elha Elliott, of 1402 Columbus avenue. Two youths riding in it leaped out and fled toward Beaver avenue.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.

To the editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Mrs. Rogers and I just looked out of our window and Mr. Hoover was coming into our hotel for the night. He is on some Chautauqua circuit and spoke in some hall here last night. Wall street is betting two and a half to one on Roosevelt. That's a bad omen for the Democrats, for Wall street hasn't been right in three years. You can hear anything you want around here about the outcome, depending on who you talk to, Democrat or Republican. Tilson, Republican leader of the House, told me, "We got everything east of the Ohio River, and north of the line" (meaning Mason and Dixon). Admiral Grayson says, "only way the Democrats can lose is to sell out." So take your choice.

WOMAN FIGHTS 3 INTRUDERS

Police and county detectives today sought two men and a woman reported to have invaded the apartment of Mrs. Jane Carlisle, of 129 Brownsville road, Mt. Oliver, yesterday, bound her with rope and fled with a small amount of jewelry when they took fright at her screams.

Mrs. Carlisle told police she was alone in the apartment when two men and a woman summoned her to the door and asked for "Walter."

She said she told them no one named Walter lived there, but they forced their way into the apartment. One man and the woman went to the kitchen, she said, and the other man carried her into a bedroom, where he tied her hands and feet and fastened her to the bed.

She fought with her assailant, inflicting scratches, before the three became frightened at her screams and fled, she said. A diamond bracelet and ring and two pawn tickets were taken from her purse by one of the men, police said.

Struggling free of the bonds that bound her to the bed, Mrs. Carlisle managed to roll onto the floor and then to the telephone, where she knocked the receiver from the hook and dialed Mt. Oliver Police Station, police said.

Sergt. Louis Miller answered the call and hurried to the apartment, where he reported finding the woman with her hands and feet tied, he told County Detectives Michael Stabile and David Carlin.

'Open House' Slated For City Schools

Open house will be held in connection with Education Week in the schools, according to announcement of Frank M. Gatto, of the Board of Public Education. The schedule follows: Elementary schools, Monday evening, November 7; high schools, Wednesday evening, November 9, and trade schools Thursday evening, November 10. The public is invited to inspect the schools.

BANKER WEDS CLUBWOMAN

Eluding their friends, Miss Lyde Kerr Wilson, clubwoman, who for almost a quarter century has been identified with local welfare work for the blind, and Charles C. Chalfant, 58, president of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, Sharpsburg, slipped away late yesterday and were married.

The wedding came as a surprise to their friends. Where the ceremony was performed could not be learned last night, but the couple is expected to return to the city today. They will make their home on Callowhill street.

West View Student Missing From Home

No clew has been found to explain the disappearance of Robert J. Reid, Jr., 13, from his home, Glenmore and Rochester roads, West View, last Saturday morning. Robert, a student at West View Junior High, went out to sell candy. His father is unemployed. He has not been seen since.

Robert has sandy hair, a round face. He was wearing a black leather coat with a sheepskin collar. He is about 5 feet 8 inches tall.

Two Youths Admit 'Wrecking' Cemetery

Two 16-year-old boys of Ross Township have admitted overturning tombstones in Bayne Memorial Cemetery and carrying one marker, more than a century old, on to the porch of a Summit home, accoring to Chief of Police Dan Rosemeier, of Bellevue. He said arrest of other youths was expected. The two will be given a hearing on charges of malicious mischief tomorrow night before Burgess W. F. Cooley.

Malkus Will Leaves Estate of $12,000

FIRE IN STORE ROUTS SCORE OF SLEEPERS

Girl Balked in Rescue As Smoke Fills Two Buildings

Nearly a score of persons were forced from their homes in night attire into a driving rainstorm early today when fire broke out in the basement of the Sherman Drug Store, Swissvale and Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg.

Dense clouds of smoke filled the hallways and rooms of the three-story building and an adjoining structure, hampering the work of firemen.

GIRL TRIES RESCUE

The fire, confined to the basement and rear of the store, caused damage estimated at $2,000, according to Fire Chief Samuel Jeffries.

Returning to her home from a Halloween celebration, Margaret Humes, 25, was restrained from entering the building to rescue her father, Robert; her mother, Sarah; a brother, John, and two sisters, Betty and Ruby.

Meanwhile Humes, awakened by firemen, led his family to the rear of the building where he broke a window leading to a ladder connecting the Sherman Building with another at 1038 Penn avenue. The family made its way to the street through the hallways of this building rapidly filling with smoke.

WOMAN SAVED

Fireman rescued Mrs. Clara Davis, tenant of the second floor, from a balcony to which she had been assisted by a passerby.

The other tenants of the building, P. J. Flaherty and his wife and son, made their way to safety by way of the fire escape.

Consolidated Bank Chartered at Donora

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The Comptroller of Currency announced today granting of a charter to the Union National Bank of Donora at Donora, Pa., to succeed the First National Bank and the Union Trust Company of Donora.

Ben Binns is to be the president and H. O. Colgan cashier of the new institution. The capital is $200,000.

Parades and Dances Held in Scores Of Districts

The eerie folk of Halloween—the goblins, the ghosts and the witches—dampened plenty by a steady drizzling rain, came to the Pittsburgh district for their annual merry-making last night.

However, the rain failed to prevent scores of neighborhood demonstrations that brought homefolk out dressed in many-hued costumes.

Of the district celebrations, the largest was on the North Side, under auspices of the Business Men's Association of the East North Side.

The celebration was featured by a parade. More than 100 prizes were distributed to marchers.

On the South Side, at South Seventeenth and Carson streets, American Legion Post No. 453 sponsored a neighborhood celebration. There were food baskets for the needy and prizes for the costumed.

The Crafton Business Men's Association fete was postponed until tonight.

In the county's North and South parks Halloween dances were held in the afternoon and evening.

Scores of parades, street dances, parties and festivals were held in other sections of the city and county.

The costumed 22-months-old Audrey May Christman, of 725 Filbert street, was the popular choice of the crowd at the Halloween party held in Motor Square Garden last night where the dance marathon is in progress. Vallie Ann Cochrane, 10, of 5631 Margaretta street, was second and Ronald Steck, 2, of 2910 Shadeland avenue, was third.

Halloween Fatal

NORMAN DINKEL, 5

Norman, 821 Proctor way, fatally burned in his home as he dressed—far too early—to make masked visits to the homes of little playmates. His flimsy costume caught fire, burned his mother as she tried to extinguish it.

BOY MUMMER DIES BY FIRE

Five-year-old Norman R. Dinkel was dead today because he couldn't resist the temptation of trying on his Santa Claus costume he planned to wear during the Halloween celebration last night.

The youngster was burned as he played about the kitchen stove. His clothing aflame, he ran, screaming, to his mother, Mrs. Rosella W. Dinkel, who, aided by the boy's grandfather, W. Joseph Dinkel, beat out the flames. Mrs. Dinkel was severely burned about the hands.

Norman was taken from his home, 821 Proctor way, Beltzhoover, to St. Francis Hospital, where he died at 3:30 p. m.

Besides his mother and father, Norman leaves two brothers and a sister. His father has been unemployed for a year.

Halloween, externally damp, passed off quietly, police reported today. But two arrests were made. The offenders, both in costume, were arrested by South Side police on charges of disorderly conduct.

2 LOOT STORE IN EAST END

Two armed bandits held up Albert Kissin in his grocery store, 223 Shady avenue, and escaped after looting the cash register of $50 last night.

Kissin told police one of the bandits asked for a package of cigarets and when he reached for them, the thug's companion pointed a revolver and ordered him to "stick 'em up."

Mrs. Mollie Brown, of 352 Melwood street, was robbed of her purse containing $40 near her home last night by a boy who snatched the bag from her arm and fled.

Two boys snatched a purse from Marie Starr, of 310 Roup street, while she was walking in Ravenna street. It contained $2.

Restaurant Thieves Take Food and Fan

Six dozen eggs, 25 pounds of coffee, an electric fan valued at $20 and a cash register valued at $15 was the loot of thieves who forced a rear door to the restaurant of Mike Scordialos, at 923 Wylie avenue, he reported to detectives today.

While prohibition agents were forcing their way into a one-story building in Highland avenue, Turtle Creek, the electric lights in the place were extinguished last night. The agents found nobody in the darkened building, but reported finding a 50-gallon still, two gallons of moonshine and 400 gallons of mash.

Confiscation of gin and whisky was reported in raids on a speakeasy in Mendota street and another in Sedgwick street, both on the North Side.

Haller to Prepare Paper for Engineers

Augustine C. Haller, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Aero Club and local glider enthusiast, has been invited to present a paper on "Motorless Flight," by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at its annual meeting in Chicago during the World's Fair next June. Haller, an authority on soaring and sail planes, has been an enthusiastic proponent of the sport for several years, having spent considerable time in Europe where the glider was first conceived.

Haller's associate in the manufacture of gliders here, Martin Schempp, left Pittsburgh last week to survey activities among soaring enthusiasts on the West Coast.

Dinner to Feature City Planning Meet

A Pittsburgh civic dinner will be held for visiting delegates to the National Conference on City Planning here November 14 and 15. The dinner will be November 15 in the Hotel William Penn, held by the 24 organizations participating in the conference.

Speakers will include Thomas Adams, nationally-known lecturer and author, and Louis Brownlow, director of the Public Administration House, Chicago.

Paintings Purchased At Shows Displayed

The shouting and the tumult about post-impressionism never filtered into the Carnegie Institute. Although the Art Society slipped a small show of modern American paintings into the Carnegie Institute following the Armory Show in New York City during 1913, the bomb was a dud and did not even rouse local controversy.

Change intruded, however, in the interim between the pre-war exhibition of 1914 and its successor in 1920. In the post-bellum show of 1920, there was a strong infusion of modern paintings. Two canvases of contemporary trend were purchased and are included in the present symposium.

Certain of the paintings seem as fresh as when first seen.

On the roster of 1921, is "A Spring Evening," by R. J. Enraght Moony, which vanquishes the years with its pristine mood of Celtic youth on a vernal holiday.

FOREIGNERS PREFERRED

Eugene Speicher's "The Hunter," from 1923, reminds one that Speicher and his colleagues developed the first distinctively and substantial American genre in figure pointing comparable to that already inaugurated in landscape painting by men like Radfield. However, in the years following the Speicher purchase, although many fine American paintings were shown, collectors preferred a foreign majority.

Of the 1924 paintings, the original flavor abides in Carte's modern peasant version of the "Madonna with Musicians" and in Jacovleff's serene and majestic portrait group by the sea.

Augustus John's "The Icelander," and Cosson's "Dancers' Dressing Room," are the elect of the 1925 crop which does not seem to include a single American. Of the 1926 group, Gill's "Pastoral," a modern English mutation of a traditionally mythologically disguised nude, is an entertaining picture.

In 1927, more than the average number of timely purchases occurred. There is the intelligently designed "Winter Landscape" by Vanessa Bell; Henry Lamb's reticent portrait of Edwin John, son of Augustus, and Montanari's classic composition of a boy, Anton Faistauer's splendid, "Still Life: Fruit," seems, to our eyes, the best selection of the entire foreign section for all 30 years.

AMERICANS MAKE GAIN

In 1928, the Americans almost held their own in the number of purchases. The distinguished American painting of that and many another year is Carl Schmitt's "Christening Party at Chartres." A modest biography of a basket of bread by the Spaniard, Dali, is also a valid choice.

The year 1929, with the purchases augmented by A. C. Lehman's entrance into the field of local art patronage, resulted in many commendable additions. Glackens' blissful bathers, Junyer's solemn festa in Mallorca, and Paul Nash's "Sea Holly" unite as a congenial modern trinity.

From the 1930 show, three canvases emerge insistently, Karfiol's "Two Figures On a Couch," Dezire's "Flowers," and Solana's mordantly powerful "Bullfight in Turegano."

Among the 1931 items, "Gilleley Harbor," by Fuhr, and "Flowers," by Wollheim render the ordinary, the compelling.

The Pittsburgh painters represented in the exhibition and the portraits of Pittsburgh persons will be discussed in later articles.

The exhibition disappoints because of omissions. Probably paintings with a local association by Whistler, La Farge, Homer, Sargent, Eakins, Cessat, Ryder, Davies and Bellows, to name but a few, cannot again be easily purchased. In many instances, mediocre Europeans have been chosen while significant Americans have been ignored.

It is almost a hundred years since Emerson said:

"Our day of dependence, our long apprenticeship to the learning of other lands, draws to a close. The millions that around us are rushing into life cannot always be fed on sere remains of foreign harvests. Events, actions, arise that must be sung, that will sing themselves."

What will a similar international exhibition show 30 years hence?

EMPLOYMENT GAINS MADE IN STATE

HARRISBURG, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Further improvement in the employment situation in Pennsylvania was noted in certain sections of the state in the semi-monthly report today of the Bureau of Employment.

Increased employment was reported in transportation, anthracite mining, and textile manufacturing lines.

High lights of the report included:

Altoona—Silk mills continuing on a working schedule that includes between 75 and 80 per cent of their normal number of employes.

Harrisburg—Pennsylvania Railroad shops at Enola recalled 100 employes to build 400 steel cars, and a large number of yard brakemen and road workers recalled. Railroads operating with two yard crews have added a third.

Reopening of steel mills took thousands back to their jobs in the Pittsburgh and western district. Road and bridge construction also employed many. Several glass plants reopened.

The Harrisburg-Lancaster-York industrial belt reported increases in employment in clothing factories and in railroad shops.

Along the trend of factories, mills and mines to take on additional help, however, the bulletin reported large surpluses of nearly all classes of labor.

Coal production failed to make expected seasonal gains, but was much higher than during the spring and summer.

Railroad shops recalled some workers. Harvesting gave employment to many. Radio and chemical factories reported additional help hired. State road building gave work to 40,000.

In the Erie, Bradford and Oil City districts, building programs brought some labor back to work. These programs included erection of the Pymatuning Dam, road work, building a new department store and expansion of several oil plants. The oil industry was reported working on "satisfactory schedules.

Road Celebration Cut Short by Rain

Ceremonies marking completion of the widening of Beverly road in Mt. Lebanon were cut short last night because of rain. Township Commissioners L. C. Clark, Samuel A. Meneilly and Ronald Thompson delivered brief addresses.

The business section of Beverly road, between Outlook drive and Ralson street, was widened to 70 feet. Property owners on each side of the section made gifts of 10 feet of land to the township for the improvement.

burned horribly as I tried to calculate my steps and my direction. I could hear the orang sucking in wind and grunting, this animal's favorite method of expressing anger, but without my eyesight I was not sure how close I was to him.

My hands kept raising themselves toward my eyes in an almost overwhelming desire to scratch and rub, and it was only by a concentration of will power that I was able to keep them down, realizing that my only hope of safety lay in not giving the poison a chance to penetrate the skin.

FEAR AND PAIN

In the course of that tortured journey from the snake's box to the open air a dozen eternities seemed to elapse. All the time I was in the clutch of a terrible fear—the fear of death or permanent blindness. The picture that arose in my mind was of Joe Winter's moaning Airedale after he had been struck by cobra poison, and of his quick death.

I walked on, each step seeming to take a year as I picked my way along that miserable floor. Finally, after more time seemed to pass than I had put in altogether on the earth, I could hear the squawking of the cockatoos and I knew I was nearing the door. Once there, I yelled for Ali. No answer. I yelled again, and I'm sure the cry must have burst most of the eardrums in Katong.

My eyes burned with a new intensity as I came out into the sunlight and stood there waiting for the boy to appear. It was the worst pain I had ever suffered. Again I concentrated my will in an effort to keep my hands from going up to rub my eyes.

Finally I heard Ali's bare feet shuffling on the pathway, and the question, "Apa eni, tuan, apa eni?" ("What's the matter, master, what's the matter?")

I quickly told him. The boy set up a characteristic wailing. I would never see him again, he said.

Then he noticed my hands go up to protect my eyes from the burning sun. This galvanized him into action. He did not propose to let me scratch myself. He grasped my hands and held them firmly down at my waist.

DOCTOR SUMMONED

"Take hold of my arm," I ordered, "and get me to the house." I described a boric acid bottle in my medicine chest and sent him for it. He mixed it with warm water and I began bathing my eyes, applying the solution with sponges of soft cotton. The only result was to intensify the pain, but I was sure I could wash away a good deal of the poison from the surface of the skin. So I kept at it, meanwhile sending Ali to a shop in Katong village, where there was a telephone.

His orders were to call up Joe Winter at the Raffles Hotel in Singapore, tell him what had happened, and ask him to bring out a doctor.

Half an hour later Joe and the doctor arrived in an automobile. The doctor applied a drug of some kind, followed by cold bandages.

The doctor's medicine gradually eased the pain. I sat there, with heavy wet compresses over my eyes, while the doctor changed them every minute or two.

My thoughts were busy analyzing my symptoms. I was watching for some indication that the poison had entered my system. I wondered just how it would first manifest itself. Presently a cramped foot acted numb, and I felt sure that this was the sign I awaited. Then the numbness passed, and I breathed a sign of relief. I felt an itching sensation along my spine, and I wondered if this could be the beginning of the end. Then my head began to ache with a pounding throb and again I was sure that the poison was at work.

VISION RESTORED

At the end of three hours of mental and physical torture my blinded eyes began to distinguish faintly the lights of the room, as the doctor changed the dressings. Another hour, and I began to see hazily. But the terrific pain continued.

Joe remained by my side all night long, fortifying himself from time to time with long drinks of Scotch.

The doctor, who had gone home about midnight, returned in the morning. My eyes were as bloodshot as if I had been out on a 10-year drunk. But I could see. The doctor examined me carefully and pronounced me cured.

Zoologists, with whom I discussed the matter afterward, agreed that the most significant detail of my story of Joe's dog was that which had to do with the animal's frantic scratching of his eyes after the cobra had spat at him. The Airedale's death was, undoubtedly, the result of his scratching.

Perhaps Ali's holding of my hands during those few moments of intensest agony down by the animal shed saved my life. Had I scratched my eyes after the cobra shot his venom, death might have resulted.

Let me say in conclusion that after a week I was seeing as well as ever. And today I can see well enough to lasso a crane on the wing.

But that is another story.

Dawes Seems to Be The 'Forgotten Man'

Much has been said about the "forgotten man" in this campaign. Roosevelt first popularized the phrase in labeling great groups which he said had been forgotten by the Hoover administration. Then Republican pinned the label on Speaker John Garner.

But the real forgotten man of the campaign seems to be Gen. Charles Gates Dawes, former Vice President, now back in Chicago as a banker. Hundreds of the business men who now militantly support Mr. Hoover, and who last winter and spring were saying things about him more bitter than any campaigning Democrats so far have uttered, wanted Gen. Dawes as the Republican presidential candidate.

That didn't happen. And since the convention there has been no word from Gen. Dawes on the subject of the campaign, not a word of politics since he resigned from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, only a few days ahead of the time his Chicago bank secured a loan of $80,000,000 from the federal agency he had headed.

$750 Cash Offered for Name of Radio Singer

Reward Will Be Paid Everyone Who Submits Most Suitable Name

Here is another unusual announcement from Hollywood. A new Radio Singer to be featured in an old song program wants a Radio Name, and $750.00 Cash will be paid for the best suggestion. Readers may send their own name, or any other name they think of, as officials say any name may win the $750.00.

The Company featuring this Radio Girl in old song programs believes the Public will take a greater interest in these musical programs if they have a part in the selection of a Radio name for the Singer, and in order to secure suggestions quickly, $750.00 in cash is offered to anyone who is quick in sending the name selected. Officials say anyone has a chance to win this prize by sending their own name or the name of a friend or relative, or a coined name made up by them. Readers of this announcement are urged to send their suggestions for a name at once because $250.00 Extra will be given the winner if the name is mailed and postmarked before November 6, 1932, otherwise the reward is only $500.00. Just make the name easy to pronounce, and easy to remember, but send a name right away or you may be too late for the promptness prize.

The Rules of the Contest are very simple. All entries must be sent to Radio Director's Office, Studio, Z-445, 1023 N. Sycamore Ave., Hollywood, California. Officials of the Company say only one suggestion for a name must be submitted by each contestant; everyone but employes of the firm or their relatives, are invited to submit a name, and in case of ties duplicate awards will be given. Readers may send their suggestion for a name on a postcard, or any kind of paper. The important thing is to send the name at once, because it means $750.00 in cash to everyone who is quick in sending the name selected.

'Forward March' in Nixon Doesn't Stand Still For a Second

By GEORGE SEIBEL

To give an itemized inventory of a mince pie is comparatively easy, but it's far better to say it's good and spicy. So let that be said first of the new Brown and Henderson revue, which is called "Forward March" with some reason, for it never stands still. When you come to the reasons for its palatability, the main ingredient appears to be melody, in songs and dances full of rhythm. It is chiefly a musical show—then it's an array of beauty that is more than skin deep—then there is comedy by Smith and Dale that is particularly amusing in the Bolshevik baseball game and the skit of seasickness. So the audience at the Nixon had the comfortable feeling that its mince pie was savory and full of meat, even though some of the chunks served by the lady at the piano were decidedly strong.

Mr. Seibel

Lew Brown and Ray Henderson produce music of the most approved revue brand—seductive and tinkling and sonorous when it needs to be. The song, "I Hate to Think That You'll Grow Old, Baby," sung by Sally Sweet and Johnny Downs, is especially captivating. "It's Great to Be Alive," sung by Gracie Barrie, also is infectious. "Let's Call It a Day," sung by Carolyn Nolte and Milton Watson, has an appealing quality.

But the real vocal gems of the revue are presented by George Dewey Washington and the Will Vodrey Singers, a colored ensemble, which gave "Home to Harlem" and "Old Mother Nature" with fine vocal quality and enthusiasm.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SHOW

After the music has received its meed of appreciation, the next point obvious is that here is a young people's show. Rarely do so many fresh faces and voices come together in a revue. Those "most advertised show girls" who persuade the world to use their lipstick or chewing gum could hardly be distinguished from the proletariat of the unphotographed chorus—all were fresh and fair and fragrant like the flowers that used to bloom in the spring.

Among the young people, new faces, unfamiliar names, there are some that will be heard from in days to come—such as Melissa Mason, whose dancing was quite extraordinary, and Sally Sweet, whose singing has an arch quality very insinuating.

In fact, the only spots that need sandpaper or old-fashioned sapolio are the sketches of Nan Blackstone, which must have been written by a Minsky farmer in collaboration with Smedley Butler. Nan's refinement isn't much to brag about. Her appeal is to the olfactory senses.

SOME GOOD COMEDY

There is also a sissified episode in the "Torch Song" number that ought to be kicked out. For the rest of the comedy, furnished by Smith and Dale, it may be said that it deserved more approval than it got. A few old gags, like the pigeon on the baseball field and the doctor's patient "back again," are outweighed by some capital clowning. The audience began to laugh after it discovered that Smith and Dale were comedians. Most comedians tell the audience that they are comedians, and then the audience is ready to laugh at once.

Two particularly striking and attractive ensemble numbers are well worth seeing and hearing. One of these is the finale of the first act, "Restless," which culminates in a fine futuristic climax of rhythm and color. The other is the old-fashioned beer garden, with all the old German songs, from "Lauterbach" to "Bier her" and "Du bist verrueckt, mein Kind."

Altogether it was a very pleasant evening—a tasty mince pie, we should say, of which an itemized inventory isn't needed. It is spicy and well baked and fresh.

Movie Tyro, Mae West To Team

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 1.

John Davis Lodge, New York society man, will get his first taste of Hollywood showmanship when studio officials inform him he is to play opposite Mae West in "Honky Tonk."

The teaming of these two—strutting, frank-talking Mae and the ex-attorney, who not only is a Boston blue-blood but the grandson of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge—makes great exploitation stuff and is just another reason why we, in Hollywood, never have a dull moment.

From a professional point of view, it also will be fine for Mr. Lodge. New actors need to attract the attention of the public. And Paramount has thus supplied a sure-fire way.

John Davis Lodge

As I wrote some time back, Mr. Lodge had a movie contract more or less thrust upon him. He came to the coast to visit his wife, Francesca Braggiotti, and ran into Al Kaufman at Malibu. Al suggested a screen test and, more or less as a joke, Lodge went through with it. To his infinite surprise, the studio asked him to sign on the dotted line.

Closing his New York practice—he had done some legal work for Paramount—he boarded the SS. Virginia and headed for the new adventure.

INTIMATE GLIMPSES

Styles, she confided to me, weren't so comfortable in those days, and besides where was a lady to sit down. Finally she let herself down cautiously on the edge of a settee.

We talked about the return of romance to the screen. Mary believes it is inevitable. Her young niece, she tells me, is in open revolt against the realism of the recent screen. And then there are letters, hundreds of them, urging her to do another romantic story.

Mary Pickford

About to start a picture, Mary is always keyed to a pitch of enthusiasm. She is very doubtful about being able to keep that Yuletide tryst with Doug in St. Moritz. The picture may not be finished and if it is there is "Shantytown." This time, Mary insists she will make two films in rapid succession. And when Mary is determined, that's that.

MOVIE CHATTER

Many of the stay-out-lates were on hand to see the new show in the Roosevelt Blossom Room. The biggest party of notables included Constance Talmadge, Townsend Netcher, Dolores Del Rio, Cedric Gibbons, Virginia Valli, Charles Farrel, Sondra Shaw and Gilbert Roland. Slim, tall and wearing a severe white gown, this pretty Shaw girl drew many an admiring glance. She danced all evening with Gilbert Roland. Charles Farrell, in case you haven't heard, tangoes very nicely. Dolores Del Rio was his partner.

Emperor Once Again Lost His Heart

According to Viennese operettas, the male members of the Hapsburg tribe spent most of their time roaming incognito around the rural regions, picking up village beauties who are coy but virtuous, and inviting them to Vienna to present a petition to the Emperor. When the belle arrives at the Hofburg, she treats the Emperor as a jolly good fellow, until she discovers that he is the All-Highest. And then he grants her petition and sends her back to the village to marry her true, though humble lover.

This is again the story of "Kaiserliebchen" ("The Emperor's Sweetheart"), new musical romance at the Avenue Cinema. As Liane Haid is the inn-keeper's daughter and Walter Janssen is the young Hapsburg, the spirit of romance runs so high you could almost believe the sugary story. There are some pretty melodies and some stirring zither music, also circus scenes full of vim. You don't mind having seen and read the same old story again and again. Besides, you can go to Equatorial Africa with Carveth Wells afterward, or see a prize-fight between two alarm clocks in a Walt Disney cartoon comedy. Your afternoon has been well spent.

Poet Swordsman

-:- Plays and Players -:-

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Back in the mid-nineties there were a couple of lads in Erasmus High School, Brooklyn, destined to become prominent in different ways in the theater. Pals they were—Walter Hampden and Clayton Hamilton. The former is coming to the Nixon next week in perhaps his greatest triumph, "Cyrano de Bergerac," and Mr. Hamilton is here now to tell about it as speaker in various clubs and assemblages of students. He is noted as lecturer, dramatic critic, editor and man of letters, whose cultural service has extended into a number of colleges, including Columbia, Barnard and Dartmouth. To his credit is a long list of books, among which is "Conversations on Contemporary Drama," along with several other works pertaining to the stage. Mr. Hamilton will be a guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the drama institute of the Drama League in the Hotel Schenley this evening. The seat sale for "Cyrano de Bergerac" will open in the Nixon boxoffice at 9 o'clock Thursday morning.

When "The Good Fairy" is presented in the Pitt next week by the Edwin Vail Players there will be seen a new leading woman, Betty Hanna, who arrived yesterday to begin rehearsals in the Ferenc Molnar comedy. This play was acted here last season, in the Alvin, under the auspices of the Professional Players, with Helen Hayes as its star, and it later had a run of 154 performances in New York.

Elaborate Presentation Of 'Blessed Event' Staged in Pitt

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Blessed Event," comedy drama built around the activities of a newspaper columnist whose expressions are frankly in imitation of those made known throughout the length and breadth of the land by Walter Winchell, was staged last night by the Edwin Vail Players in the Pitt.

Although the play, with 27 characters listed on the program, and action requiring three sets for its presentation, is a rather ambitious undertaking for a stock company, the audience, by liberal applause at the final curtain, gave evidence that it had found the proceedings satisfactory.

LEAD ROLL DIFFICULT

Henry Richards, juvenile of the company, portrayed the leading role, a really difficult task. Perhaps nobody present had seen Roger Pryor, the creator of the part, play it. Perhaps few had even seen Lee Tracy do it on the screen recently, but most all, aware of the dynamic force of Tracy, could easily have thought of what he could do for such a character, that of a vain, self-appreciative youngster, elevated in a short time from a mere figure in a newspaper office to its veritable star — all through the popularity of his column. Such thoughts would be unfair, as Mr. Richards really did well, and gave promise that he would improve ere the week is over.

Perhaps more important to consider than the work of any individual, and that of some was shiningly conspicuous, are the physical difficulties surmounted by Director Edwin Vail and his technical staff in presenting such an elaborate production. It was very well mounted.

STORY IS THIN

The story isn't much, merely that of the rise of a young reporter to a highly-paid position, the creation of enmities because of the things he learns about people, and the attempt of one of these to "bump him off," and shooting the wrong man. That is one fly in the ointment—gangsters seldom fail in that way.

Certainly, Mr. Vail ought to be commended for putting this play on because of its requiring so many actors that the playing profession could easily think the demand might be a sign of something or other affecting employment. Not only are all regular members of the company seen in the play, but about a score of others, including Peggy Dougherty, Pittsburgh actress.

Especially nice characterizations were those of Shirley Booth, as the columnist's sweetie; Kathryn Meskyl, as his secretary; Sam Flint, as a racketeer, and Alden Chase and Baker Moore, as newspaper men. Grace Thorson, Charles Webster, Roy Elkins and Ella Ethridge had secondary roles. There were a number of other "speaking" parts and a few wholly for atmosphere, represented by five members of the reportorial staff of the Sun-Telegraph.

'Step-Lively Girls' Academy Bill

Burlesque in the Academy this week, "Step Lively Girls," features Red Marshall, eccentric comedian, and Johnny Crosby, impersonator of Italian characters. Joan Lee, a blonde, billed as the "Peggy Joyce of Burlesque," is prominent as dancer who is a chief figure in two of the principal musical numbers of the piece. Dolores Dawn, another dancer, performed most of the time on the illuminated runway. Comedy bits of the show include "Pullman Car" and "Ole Man River."

Travelogue by Newman To Cover Orient

Points of interest in China and Japan will be shown and described in E. M. Newman's fourth travelogue, to be presented tonight in Carnegie Music Hall. Newman will describe and show motion and still pictures of Peking, with its Forbidden City, Summer Palace, Temple of Heaven and the Great Wall of China. He will also show Fujiyama, the sacred mountain of Japan; Kayoto and Nikko, Beppu, Myajima, Myanoshita and Kamakura and its buddha.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Lucky Piece

JIM LIKED nothing better in the world than to sit around all night playing poker. But after he had sat in with the same group of men several times, he invariably discovered that his presence wasn't exactly vital to their happiness. Smiles of welcome became forced. When he arose to go home, no one protested verly loudly—or very sincerely.

Now you can lean back and relax. For it wasn't because he hadn't learned to play the piano in five easy lessons. Nor because he didn't own a saxophone. It was simply that Jim was too lucky. He could sit down at a game with 16 cents in his pocket and go home with everything on the table. I think I am safe in stating that Jim could win the shirt off your back. That is, if you are lucky enough, in these times, to have a shirt.

It was always like that from the time he was a kid. It began with marbles. Then there was a bicycle in a raffle at the neighborhood movie house. The bicycle should have gone by rights to the manager's nephew. But something slipped, and it became Jim's.

Later there was Flo. At least two other men were extremely unhappy when Flo decided to pass them up in favor of Jim. Just lucky again. Whether or not the two gentlemen changed their opinion within the next few years in regard to who was truly lucky is something else again.

Not Jim, however. There were but two things in life that mattered to him—Flo and gambling, and they are named in the order of their importance. Yet, strangely enough, he could not give up the racket.

He could stop for a week. Sometimes for a month. Then the fever would be on him again, always a little worse than before. Of course you have guessed by this time that the old home town would become a trifle unsatisfactory to Jim and that he would yearn to hit the big time games in the big cities. Although he won steadily, his winnings were small. Yet this did not make Jim unhappy. He knew that his break would come soon.

Thinking about it, he would draw out a shining $20 gold piece that he carried in his watch pocket. This was the first piece of money he had ever won. It was his one superstition. His lucky piece. Nothing on earth could have induced him to part with it. He felt that, in some way, as long as he carried it, his luck would last. And he would never be absolutely broke.

His break came when he and Flo had been married a year. There were but three important winners in that big sweepstakes, and Jim was one of the three. Need I tell you that he lost no time in shaking the dust of the old home town from his brogues?

Of course Flo went, too. Not willingly, but because she loved Jim and realized that, in spite of everything, he really loved her. But she was very miserable about it. Miserable and lonely.

More than once she urged him to give it all up and go back home. His answer was always the same.

"Quit now, honey? While I'm winning?" he would say blithely. "Nothing doing. The time to quit is when you're broke—wiped out. That's the time to start all over in a small town. No siree, baby. Enjoy it while we've got it, and when we're broke, we'll beat it back."

Then he would pull out his lucky piece and begin to rub it lovingly. Flo's glance was anything but loving.

"Broke!" she would echo bitterly. "How can you ever be broke as long as you have that $20 gold piece, will you tell me? And you'd much rather lose an eye than part with that. Oh, Jim, I tell you I'm unhappy here! Can't we go home?"

Jim would shake his head.

"Not right now, dear. It'd be a crime to pass up a string of luck like I've run into lately. When they clean me out of everything, including this old gold piece, then we'll get out."

"That day'll never come," Flo would murmur. Her hopes of a sane and normal life in the little cottage were fading rapidly.

The only chance of their returning, she knew, was that Jim should lose everything he owned, including his lucky piece. In the early days she prayed for exactly that to happen. But in vain. Jim continued to win. The man's luck was positively uncanny.

From one city to another journeyed Mr. and Mrs. Jim. By the time they reached New York, Flo was bitter and downright desperate. She was sick of hotel life, sick of loneliness. She made one last appeal to her husband.

"Jim," she pleaded, "won't you give up this crazy life? For me? Come on, darling, let's go home. If you won't come—well, I'll have to go anyway. I just can't stand it any longer. But it would make me very, very happy if you would come with me."

Jim patted her hand. It was plain to be seen that he didn't completely believe her.

"Not now, honey," he said again. "Stick it out with me for a while, and when I'm broke, I'll go back with you."

He took out his gold piece and rubbed it absent-mindedly. Flo watched him with a helpless expression. That night she packed her things and left . . .

Jim had honestly intended to join his wife in a few weeks. But as long as he continued to carry a dollar in his pocket, he couldn't keep away from the crap games. Her letters made him very unhappy, for it was obvious that she wanted him and missed him.

"If you don't come," she wrote at last, "I swear that I'll do something desperate. I can't go on living without you, Jim, but I can't live your life. I know that you'll never come back to me while you have money. While you have your lucky piece. You'll never lose that. Your luck is too strong. So you see, don't you, that it's all pretty helpless? Please, Jim, come home."

Jim was a little troubled as he read the letter. But that evening the dice behaved in a most gratifying manner, and he forgot about Flo. He thought about her one or twice the next day, intended to send her flowers or a bracelet, but never quite got around to it. He wanted to prove to her that he still loved her, but he was just a little too busy.

For a week he gambled, and won steadily. Then one night he came back to his hotel at a very late hour. As he was passing through the lobby, the clerk handed him a telegram. With a sinking feeling, Jim tore it open.

It was from Flo's mother, and read:

"Flo's body found in creek this morning stop left note saying could not live without you stop better come at once."

Mechanically, Jim stepped into the elevator. He unlocked the door of the room that had been his and Flo's. He bagan to pull out his bags and pack his things. He hadn't needed the telegram to make up his mind.

With a strange smile, he felt in his vest pocket. It seemed very queer to be, for the first time in his gambling career, without his lucky piece . . .

Depression Is Film Topic

Suddenly awakened to the drama of recent financial upheavals, Hollywood movie plants are turning out a cycle of pictures along this line. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer joins the parade with "The Money King," a story now in preparation for Lional Barrymore.

This picture, formerly called "The Gold Spangled Banner," will not, as originally planned, trace the history of American depressions. Finding that R-K-O has covered the same ground in "The Conquerors," authors Edgar Selwyn and Upton Sinclair will now confine their story to the last two generations.

Una Merkel Signed For MGM Film

Una Merkel made such a good foil for Jean Harlow in "The Red-Headed Woman" that M. G. M. has signed her to play a similar role in "Nora." As soon as the rest of the cast is assembled, Director Rowland Brown will get under way on this film. It will be the platinum blonde's third picture under her M. G. M. contract.

No Animals Used in 'Animal Kingdom'

Just to make it clear that "The Animal Kingdom" is not a sequel to Frank Buck's "Bring 'Em Back Alive," Director Edward H. Griffith wishes to tell the world and ambitious pet owners in particular, that there are to be no animals in the Ann Harding—Leslie Howard vehicle now in production.

In Movie

Jess Quaise, Pitt all-America tackle for 1931, will be seen in "The All-American," film coming Friday to the Warner.

FLANIGAN MAN QUITS RACE

Former Deputy Constable William A. Riley, one of Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan's candidates for deputy constable in the First Ward, asked leave to withdraw his petition for the appointment in Quarter Sessions Court. He gave no reasons. Judge Frank P. Patterson allowed the withdrawal.

A deadlock still exists between Flanigan and Constable Andrew M. Maloney over the deputies. Neither will indorse the other's candidates, and the court has been unable to act because neither's petition fulfills the legal requirements. Maloney's petitions do not contain assurance from the alderman that he will give employment to applicants, while Flanigan's petitions are illegal, because the deputies must be appointed by the constable and approved by the court.

Suit Over Serious Auto Injury Ended

FRANKLIN, Pa., Nov. 1.—Counsel for Miss Margaret Hunter, awarded $19,834 in a suit against the West Ridge Transportation Company last February, have announced withdrawal of motion for a new trial. A similar motion was made by the West Ridge company last March.

Miss Hunter sued for $100,000. Injured in an automobile accident in 1930, she will have to wear a cast on her neck the remainder of her life, surgeons say.

Mother of 7—Still Young

Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement.

The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the usual cathartic. You'll be rid of all that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colds? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Notre Dame Brace Seen. — Minor Stars Cast-Offs.
Tigers Still Have Poe. — Moren First Knuckler.
Mohler Misses Honors. — Floor Start at State.

IRISH MAY RALLY FOR STRONG FINISH

THE LOSS OF last Saturday's game to Pitt, though killing a chance for a season without a defeat, does not necessarily spell disaster for the Irish through the remainder of the campaign. Notre Dame spirit is too great to be crushed by a mere defeat on the striped field. Out in South Bend they are taught how to lose, as well as how to win, and they will be only running true to Irish tradition if they come right back fighting harder than ever, refusing to be disheartened or slowed up by the Panther reverse.

Mike Koken

Notre Dame has yet to meet Kansas, Northwestern, Navy, Army and Southern California—all away from home except Northwestern — and whether the brace is brought about by the placing of Mike Koken, Kitty Gorman and Hugh Devore on the first team to supplant Nick Lukats, Ben Alexander and Capt. Paul Host, or by some other means, it won't be surprising if the aroused Ramblers go the remainder of the way without a defeat. They're surely due to pull themselves together, but whether or not a shake-up in the first string is the thing needed is a question. The dropping of the last three hard games—to Southern California, Army and Pitt—all of which the Irish figured to win, and two of them before the services of Schwartz, Hoffman and Yarr were lost, may cause some wonder as to whether or not it has been all the fault of the players.

FOOTBALL AT PRINCETON would not be complete without a Poe. Neilson Poe, the only holdover from the old Tiger regime of coaches [illegible] has done for 14 years, handling the [illegible] Princeton [illegible] ever since.

At Yale, Poe was not coached exclusively at Princeton. Before becoming freshman mentor there he tutored the gridders at Wesleyan, was head coach at Illinois in 1899, and for four straight years, after the Princeton season ended, he helped to coach Navy.

NEILSON IS THE fourth of the six famous Poe brothers famous in Princeton football history. One of the others, Arthur, an end, played for the Homestead All-Stars in 1900 and with other pro teams here later.

Before coming here from Princeton, Arthur defeated Yale in two successive years by individual brilliance. He grabbed up a fumble and ran 100 yards for the winning touchdown in 1898, and in 1899 he pulled the Eli game out of the fire for the Tigers with a field goal dropkicked from the 35-yard line in the closing moments.

SOME GRIDIRON SHORTS: Detroit and Oregon State are trying to get together for a game in Detroit on Thanksgiving Day, an open date for both. Michigan's stadium is the only one of the big bowls that was financed entirely from gate receipts. The Oklahoma Aggie freshman eleven has lost every game for three years. A high school correspondent informed the newspapers that one of the players "had quit the team to resume his studies!"

THE ENFORCED RETIREMENT of Orville Mohler from football on account of a dangerous neck injury not only cost Southern California the services of a great quarterback for the remainder of the season, but was the last word in hard luck for the player in another direction.

Mohler

For it cut Mohler down just as he was about to reach, after a struggle of almost three varsity seasons, the goal of every gridder—the all-America. The Trojan quarter had his heart set on making the mythical team this year, but now he is eliminated unless the custom of requiring a full season's play is set aside.

THE BREAKS all the tougher because of the fact that when the all-America quarterback award was given to his teammate Gaius Shaver, last year, it was done partly because Mohler had another season to go. Notre Dame players voted Orville the most effective back of the pair, and they were in a position to know.

It was Mohler who carried the ball on the frozen [illegible] in those drives down the field to overcome Notre Dame's lead, and it was Mohler who waved back the substitute ordered in by Howard Jones and held the ball for the winning field goal by Johnny Baker.

BEARING OUT THE assertion made by several baseball scouts that big league prospects in the nine leagues are very scarce, the [illegible] from recently graduated [illegible] Coast Leagues [illegible] shows that [illegible] tried and found wanting. [illegible] pitcher [illegible] Clarence Beyer, Fred Muller, Ray Francisco, Hank Hogan, and the outfielders Lou Finney, Arnold Statz and Oscar Eckhardt. Statz was voted the league's most valuable player by a wide margin.

BASSLER IS 37 and was in the majors as far back as 1914. Shellenback, pitcher, is a veteran, but is barred as a spitballer. Burns is 39 and first based in the majors for 15 years. French was a light-hitting shortstop when the Dodgers 12 years ago and still can't hit.

Statz is a great fielder but was a major league failure more than once as a [illegible] batter. Eckhardt was tried by the Braves and found [illegible]. That leaves Finney, Higgins and Muller the only major league prospects—just three among the pick of the league.

PHILADELPHIA friends of Eddie Rommel, 35-year-old pitcher released by the A's, are boosting him for a job with some National League club, offering the argument that he knows all the answers in pitching to hitting weaknesses and that his knuckle ball would be something entirely new in the senior circuit.

Earl E. Leslie

The knuckle ball might be strange to the modern crop of batters, but it wouldn't be new in the National League by any means. It was invented by a Pittsburgher, Lou Moren, of Mt. Washington, who has tried by the Pirates in 1904 and pitched for the Phillies from 1907 to 1910 under Billy Murray and Charley Dooin. Moren was throwing the knuckle ball for the Phils when Rommel was 10 years old.

IT IS THE plan of Earl E. (Spike) Leslie, new basketball coach at Penn State, to start work with the Lion floor squad within a couple of weeks. Leslie at present is assisting Coach Bob Higgins with the football team, but will give his undivided attention to basketball as soon as the grid squad finishes its labors. This, incidentally, will be early this fall, since the schedule winds up November 12. Some of the men who are not playing football will be started off in basketball work by Leslie today or tomorrow. Leslie went to Penn State this year from the New Jersey Teachers' College at Montclair, N. J., where he had been director of physical education and coach of athletics. He is a graduate of the University of Oregon, having entered the Eugene institution in 1917, the last year Hugo Bezdek was football coach there. At Oregon, Leslie played three years of football, basketball and baseball. He succeeds Dutch Hermann as varsity basketball coach at Penn State.

By JULIUS LEVIN

One of the most remarkable scoring records compiled by a scholastic football star is owned by Odeal Pryor, captain and halfback of the undefeated Ford City High eleven, one of the contenders for the class A championship of the W. P. I. A. L.

In his four-year career at Ford City, Pryor has been held scoreless only three times, one of the reasons the Armstrong County eleven has been beating the best teams in the Allegheny Valley.

SCORE RULED OUT

The brilliant Negro halfback, playing his final year at Ford City, so far this season has registered eight touchdowns for John Gorman's eleven. Vandergrift, a team that succeeded in holding Ford City to a scoreless deadlock, being the only opponent to check the scoring activities of Pryor. At that, Pryor tore off a 70-yard run for a touchdown in this contest, only to have it ruled out because one of his teammates was in motion. Indiana held Pryor scoreless in his sophomore year, while Har-Brack Union turned the trick in his junior year.

Coach Honse rates Pryor the outstanding halfback in the W. P. I. A. L. and the brilliant record compiled by Odeal helps to bear out this contention.

ACE OF TEAM

Ford City may not win the W. P. I. A. L. title as a result of the deadlock played with Vandergrift, but it will not be any fault of Pryor, who has played consistent football for his team throughout his four-year career. Pryor's scoring record for the four years he has played at Ford City follows:

AMBRIDGE HOLDS LEAD

Ambridge High continues to set the pace for the class A contenders, while Glassport and Freedom are leading the way for the class B schools in the races for the W. P. I. A. L. football titles.

According to latest figures compiled under the point system Ambridge has a point total of 128 while Beaver Falls is in second place with 117½, while Monongahela is third with 107½.

In the class B fight Glassport and Freedom are deadlocked for first place, each with 115 points. Tied for second place are Springdale and Edgewood, each showing 111⅓ points.

Morrissey, Veteran Fighter, Buried

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—John Morrissey, heavyweight boxer of Boston in the days of bare-knuckle fighting, was buried here yesterday. He died Saturday night.

Morrissey once boxed a 10-round draw with John L. Sullivan, fighting with bare knuckles, in 1880, when both were struggling young fighters seeking fistic fame.

Morrissey came to Minneapolis 30 years ago from Boston.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A FESTIVAL OF 50 CENTURIES—Halloween is humanity's oldest and most universally celebrated festival. Its age, conservatively estimated, is about 1,000 years. The ancient Peruvians, the Druids, the Romans, the Persians, the Hindus, the Egyptians, all celebrated it at one and the same time as their Feast of the Dead for three days. In historical times the Celts celebrated it under the name of Samhain, still preserved in the Irish name of Shamhna. Halloween also was the Celtic New Year's Eve. At the present day such widely-scattered parts as Europe, India, China, Japan, Tonga and the South Sea Islands still celebrate the festival on October 31, despite the wide disparity of their calendars. The reason for this uniformity is the fact that the celebration is based not on their calendars, but on the position of the constellation of the Pleiades, which is uniform throughout the world.

W.-J. BATTLE BIG CHANGE FOR LOCALS

By JESS CARVER

Duquesne's Dukes and Wash-Jeff's Presies have the local football spotlight all to themselves here this week. They'll battle at Forbes Field Saturday afternoon with the Pitts out of town, meeting Penn in Philadelphia, and Carnegie Tech's varsity enjoying an off-day and looking on from the stands.

But Coach Elmer Layden isn't worrying much over the exclusiveness of the game. He wouldn't care if Pitt was playing Notre Dame again and Tech was meeting Yale. He's worrying about getting his ball club into the right mental trim for the game with Wash-Jeff, the third big game of the Red and Blue schedule, and the second in importance.

OUT FOR COMEBACK

The Dukes won their first big test when they beat West Virginia, but in the second, were soundly trounced by Pitt. Now, resuming gridiron relations with the Presidents, it is necessary that the Dukes do a comeback. After bowing to Pitt, the team rallied enough to take Oglethorpe, but suffered a letdown the week following and were beaten by West Virginia Wesleyan. At one time, there was somewhat of an idea on the Bluff that the Pitt game might be the only one to be dropped by the Night Riders this year.

The Dukes, seeking recognition as a major league eleven, so far have failed to evidence any important attacking strength in their big games. They looked fairly impressive against Westminster, Grove City and Oglethorpe, but were stopped dead by Pitt and West Virginia Wesleyan and, aside from one drive, were just so-so against West Virginia.

FULLBACKS TOUGH

And they are up against a tough one in these Presidents. The Red and Black eleven boasts two hard-driving fullbacks, Bill King and Bob Deacle, and a tricky offense, which has clicked against Lafayette, Detroit, Carnegie Tech, West Virginia Wesleyan and Xavier to date. Wash-Jeff trimmed Wesleyan 20-0 in the first game of the season, before its offensive was working right. King and Deacle will hammer the stuffin' out of the Dukes' line if it isn't at the peak.

The fact that the Dukes beat Wash-Jeff back in '27 on the occasion of the first meeting in history between elevens of the two schools won't make it any easier for the local boys this week. The memory of that upset defeat has been rankling in proud Wash-Jeff bosoms ever since, and when a memory rankles in a W. & J. bosom, it rankles.

The Tipoff

The idea is becoming fixed in many minds that the officiating in the Pitt-Notre Dame game wasn't all it might have been. For one thing, the boys let the Irish get away with intentionally grounded forward passes more than once. They also apparently missed a couple very apparent (from the stands) offsides on Pitt's part and some holding of eligible pass receivers by the Irish the three times Pitt took to the air. In that last period, and in the third, too, the Notre Dame passers did everything but eat the ball when they were set to pass and were hurried by the fast charging Pitt linemen.

Mike Sebastian will not play in the North-South all-star charity game in Baltimore after the Pitt season is over. In the first place, the University authorities will not give their o. k. and second, about that time, Mike may be planning to play a bit of football in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena on New Year's Day.

The charge of over confidence seldom, if ever, has been rightly leveled at Pitt and Carnegie Tech football teams, and for that reason, there is little need to worry over the mental attitude of the Panthers as they face Penn this week. They'll probably get a tough ball game, for every team they meet now will be primed 'em, but you can bet the Pitts won't take the field against the Quakers figuring on getting a couple quick ones and then resting. They had an idea along those lines down at West Point a few weeks ago and learned their lesson there very well in the space of about 20 minutes.

Pat Hanley, brother of the Northwestern coach and a staff aide, scouted Notre Dame here Saturday and was one of the few observers who did lay Notre Dame's performance to over-confidence. On the contrary, Hanley was of the opinion that the Irish were demoralized when they suddenly discovered that the Pitt line was every bit the equal of their own, that Walton was as good a tackle as either Kurth or Krause and that the Panthers were refusing to score at the impressive point total they'd piled up against Haskell, Drake and Carnegie Tech.

Warren Brown, sports editor of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, has a chap on his staff, Barry McNamara, who simply cannot win a bet, especially from Warren. The two of them were discussing the Pitt-Notre Dame game last week, and Warren told Mac he'd bet him anyway he wished. McNamara naturally took Notre Dame, and offered Warren points or odds. But Warren replied: "No, I'll tell you what. I'll take Pitt and give YOU six points. How's that?"

McNamara naturally grabbed the offer in a jiffy. Later, Warren intended to have some fun and boost his offer to 12 points, but the matter slipped his mind.

Mac still has yet to beat Brown on a bet.

Big Ten members have enjoyed extraordinary success in their intersectional games this season. Of 10 games played against Eastern, Southern, Big Six and Mid-Western opposition, Big Ten members have won seven, tied two and lost one.

More trouble seems to be awaiting Fordham and New York University, two of the biggest disappointments of the Eastern campaign. Fordham, beaten by Michigan State and Boston College, now must play St. Mary's Gaels, while N. Y. U., beaten by Colgate and Purdue, faces Georgia.

Eddie Casey might have given his Harvard varsity a thorough shaking up yesterday except for the fact there wasn't much to shake. Seven regulars were so badly battered in the Brown game they couldn't appear for practice.

According to Hunk Anderson, of the Notre Dame Andersons, the local sport scribes are deserving of vanity letters from Pitt. I suppose we should have come down out of the press box and tackled Sebastian.

TURF NOTABLE KILLS SELF

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Joseph M. Madden, well-known turfman, of Louisville, Ky., committed suicide in a sporting goods store yesterday with a pistol he had a clerk hand him from a showcase.

The reason for his act is a mystery. The contents of notes to his wife and his attorney, found in his pocket, were not disclosed. He had been staying at a hotel here with Mrs. Madden and their two children, John Edward 3, and Joseph McKee, 8 months.

Madden and his brother, Edward, were left an estate of about $2,000,000 by their father, John E. Madden, "wizard of the turf," who died two years ago. It included a horse breeding establishment which won the elder Madden a world-wide reputation and produced five winners of the Kentucky Derby—Old Rosebud, Sir Barton, Paul Jones, Zev and Flying Ebony.

Madden visited the sporting good store ostensibly to buy some ammunition. He asked for .38 caliber bullets, and then told John P. Schaeffer he thought they would not fit his pistol. Pointing to a gun he said:

"Hand me that gun, I'll show you what I mean."

He snapped two bullets into the chambers, put the weapon to his head and pulled the trigger before the astonished clerk could interfere. Madden died at a hospital three and a half hours later with his wife at his side.

BEAR TOSSES MATMAN

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Teddy, 300-pound grizzly bear, was too much for Frank Hiser, 185, Hamilton, Ontario, at the wrestling show here last night, tossing the Canadian welterweight in 8 minutes and breaking the youngster's collar bone.

SHADY SIDE TIED

The Shady Side Academy Junior football team tied Aspinwall Junior High yesterday afternoon on the Academy field, neither eleven being able to score.

HAGERTY DROPS N. D. SYSTEM

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Jack Hagerty, a determined looking young Irishman, fresh from the professional game, yesterday took charge of Georgetown football and in his first five minutes on the job tossed the Notre Dame system out of the window.

This well-knit young Georgetown star of seven years ago made it instantly clear he was going back to the principles taught in his own playing by Lou Little, now at Columbia, with perhaps an added dash of what he has learned in several seasons as quarterback of the professional New York Giants.

Few men have been tossed into as tough a coaching spot in midseason. Over the week end Tommy Mills, one-time disciple of Knute Rockne, resigned after two and one-half disappointing seasons on the hilltop above the Potomac, and Haggerty was called back to his alma mater to try to put it on the winning track after three straight defeats.

With the schedule calling for a game with West Virginia at Morgantown Saturday, Hagerty gave his men a full afternoon. Characteristically emphasizing the "from the neck up" aspects of football, he spent the first hours of his coaching regime on new plays.

Anderson to Start Chicago Bike Race

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Chicago's twenty-eighth international six-day bicycle race will get under way at the Chicago Stadium at 9 o'clock tomorrow night, with Hunk Anderson, Notre Dame football coach firing the starting gun.

Fifteen teams, comprising the pick of American and foreign riders, will compete, making the field the strongest that ever raced in Chicago.

Cardinals Protest Non-Appearance Of Friedman

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Dr. David Jones, owner of the Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional Football League, today filed a protest with Joe Carr, president of the league, because of the failure of Benny Friedman to play with the Brooklyn club against the Cards Sunday at Wrigley Field.

Jones' protest said that Friedman had accompanied the Dodgers to Chicago last Monday, but had departed for New York Wednesday, leaving word that he would return for the game. He failed to return, however, and Jones charges that there was no time to warn the fans that he would not be in the lineup.

The Cardinal owner asked Carr to take steps to prevent a recurrence of this breech of ethics.

BAXTER LOSES TO PAYNE

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Cecil Payne, Louisville lightweight, easily outpointed Charley Baxter, Pittsburgh, in a 10-round bout last night to win a newspaper decision.

Payne floored Baxter three times. The victor weighed 132, Baxter 136.

$100,000 Policy Taken by Simmons

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—An idea of what the Chicago White Sox gave Connie Mack for Al Simmons may be gained from the fact that the new Sox outfielder has been insured for $100,000.

Simmons took his examination yesterday and stacked up close to 100 per cent.

DUKES INVITE M'DERMOTT

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

An old friend of Dukes of other days will return to town this week end to cheer the Bluffites as they battle Wash-Jeff in homecoming combat Saturday at Forbes Field, if Frank P. McDermott, former Hilltop football mentor and athletic director, is not deterred by unforeseen circumstance from accepting a special invitation of the Duquesne Alumni Association to appear as feature speaker of the pre-game rally slated for the Red and Blue gym Friday evening.

McDermott, immediate predecessor to Elmer Layden as sports boss on the Bluff, was assistant to Mike Shortley, head grid coach in 1924, and succeeded Shortley at the helm for the campaigns of 1925 and 1926. He likewise handled Duke baseball destinies for a year and represented the Bluff institution in formation of the Tri-State Conference, of which he was one of the first presidents.

"Mac," as he was known to a multitude of Western Pennsylvania acquaintances, was intensely popular, not only on the Hill, but throughout district intercollegiate sport circles.

McDermott, it is understood, is at present district attorney of one of the larger eastern counties, and is well on the way to legal and political fame comparable to that attained by him on the gridiron as an all-American at Bucknell and as an organizer at Duquesne.

GRID GAME POSTPONED

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The Louisiana State-Oregon football game here September 10 has been postponed to December 17, Athletic Director T. O. Heard, of L. S. U., said today. The December 10 date conflicted with the annual Southern Conference meeting.

PITT OPENS DRIVE FOR BATTLE WITH PENNSYLVANIA

JOCK TO KEEP VARSITY SQUAD IN EDGE

Pitt may have beaten Notre Dame here last Saturday afternoon, thereby upsetting the national football world, but you'd never have known it had you been up on the Panther practice field yesterday afternoon.

Instead of giving the boys an afternoon off, Coach Sutherland sent them through a spirited drill in preparation for the game with the undefeated Penn eleven in Philadelphia this week. There are no open dates on the Pitt schedule, and from now on, every team the boys meet will be pointed for the game. As far as that is concerned, they haven't had any soft ones since Duquesne, for Army was on edge for the meeting with the locals, playing about as good a game as they'll turn in all season, and Ohio State had its best day to date.

PITT RESPECTS PENN

The Pitt coach is guarding against the bugaboo of over-confidence by giving his squad plenty of hard work. The scouts brought back reports indicating wholesome respect for Penn, which has defeated two major opponents, Dartmouth and Navy, to date. Pitt figures to beat Harvey Harman's Quakers, but Notre Dame was some sort of a favorite over the Panthers, too.

Both Dr. Sutherland and Yale University denied yesterday that the Panther mentor was slated to take over the job of head coach at New Haven after this season.

In the first place, Yale denied offering Sutherland the job, and in the second, Jock, with a contract having two more years to run and being well situated as he is, would not consider the proposition. Last week, when the rumor that the Elis were seeking Jock first bobbed up, Jock denied to W. Don Harrison, Pitt's athletic director, that he'd had received any such offer.

PENN WORKS HARD

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Pitt's upset victory over Notre Dame had an apparent effect on the ranks of the University of Pennsylvania gridders, the next opponents of the Panthers.

Monday has been an off day for Penn's regulars but yesterday was different. Every player was in uniform and took part in the dummy scrimmage and signal drills. Practice was secret.

Picked Pitt

V. C. A. SCULLY

In a letter published in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, last week, Scully, an employe of the Internal Revenue Department, predicted Pitt would win over Notre Dame. It develops he was the mascot of the great Pitt team of 1916. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

PETROLLE CUTS POUNDAGE

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Billy Petrolle, Duluth puncher who meets Tony Canzoneri in a 15-round bout in Madison Square Garden Friday night for the lightweight championship, has cut his weight to 138 pounds.

Scaling 142 pounds when he started training, Petrolle has worked steadily and now is within striking distance of the class limit of 135 pounds.

Canzoneri, meantime, has no weight worries. He fights habitually at around 132 or 133 pounds.

ANDY [illegible] TO SPEAK

Andy Kerr, Colgate football coach, will be the principal speaker at the banquet to be tendered the Huntingdon High football squad on November 28. Dr. John Bain Sutherland, of Pitt, and Elmer Layden, of Duquesne, also have been invited.

PURPLE DRILLS ON AIR GAME FOR O. S. U.

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Coach Dick Hanley excused the Northwestern regulars from practice yesterday, but today will devote time to improving the Wildcat forward passing game.

George Potter, regular halfback, probably will not be used against Ohio State Saturday due to recurrence of a shoulder injury.

Big Ten Briefs

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Because of a cold rain and injuries, the entire Ohio State University football squad was dismissed from practice yesterday. Coaches busied themselves devising means of adding a scoring punch for the Northwestern game at Evanston Saturday.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Several University of Michigan football players were absent from practice yesterday because of minor injuries suffered in the Princeton game, and those who reported on the field were given a forward passing drill. All the injured are expected to be ready to go to Bloomington Saturday for the Indiana game.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The Gophers yesterday listened to Coach Bernie Bierman's chalk talk on the Northwestern game last Saturday. Bierman, while preparing the team for an invasion by Mississippi this week is looking particularly toward the Wisconsin contest a week later.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The regulars took a rest yesterday, but the reserves went through a hard workout as Wisconsin began preparing for the Illinois game saturday. All players who saw action against Ohio State came out of the game without injuries.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—An attempt to inject more power into the University of Iowa's running attack against Nebraska Saturday was seen as Coach Solem shifted Francis Schammel to the fullback position on the first Hawkeye team. Schammel, a 220-pounder, replaced the 158-pound Bernard Paze.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Chicago's Maroons, subdued by their unexpected loss to Illinois Saturday, drilled lightly yesterday and were forbidden to demonstrate Purdue formations. Pete Zimmer, Chicago's most consistent back, was in uniform after a week's absence because of injuries and is expected to play against the Boilermakers.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Athletes who participated in Illinois' victory over Ohio last week were given a light drill yesterday, but Coach Bob Zuppke sent the reserves through a heavy scrimmage against Wisconsin plays. The aerial attack which proved so successful against the Maroons will be relied upon against Wisconsin this week.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Purdue's football squad returned yesterday from its victory over New York University, to encounter the first Monday drill of the season. Coach Noble Kizer promised plenty of work in preparation for Chicago Saturday. Letsinger guard, and Stone halfback, are the only players still on the injured list.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Coach E. C. Hayes started a week's drill yesterday preparing the Indiana football varsity for the Michigan game, with a long indoor session. Wolverine gridiron methods were discussed and freshman teams demonstrated the aerial tactics. Don Veller, sophomore quarterback, got a painful cut on the lip while blocking a forward pass.

DAKOTA PLAYER HURT

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Earl Thomas, of Grafton, reserve center, will be lost to North Dakota State for its Eastern football invasion this week. He suffered a broken leg in the game here last Saturday with the Moorhead (Minn.) State Teachers.

MASCOT OF '16 'CALLS' PITT'S BIG WIN

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

It is back in the football season of 1916, and Pitt has what many fans still regard as the greatest team in its history. (Jock Sutherland, present Panther mentor, was a star guard on the outfit, coached by Pop Warner.)

A big game is scheduled at Forbes Field, and Jimmy De Hart, halfback ace, shows up, as usual, with a youngster in tow. The gate man halts them, saying:

De Hart replies:

Little Irish gets in. He is Jimmy's pal, and the neighborhood mascot of the Panthers.

The years roll on. It is 1932. Pitt is scheduled to play Notre Dame, and the odds run as high as 5 to 1 against the Panthers. On all hands comes the information that Pitt doesn't have a chance. The outlook is dark, indeed.

But hold! There is one bright note amid the chorus of gloom. It is a letter from one V. C. A. Scully, and it predicts a surprising victory for Pitt. It is printed in the Sport Vignettes column of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph a few days before the game. The wise ones scoff.

But Pitt DOES beat Notre Dame, and this Scully person is dragged out from hiding and revealed in his true light. He is an accountant in the Internal Revenue Service, an ardent follower of the fortunes of the Panthers More—he is the Little Irish of 1916, a connecting link between one great team and another one.

Jimmy De Hart down South will be glad to read that Little Irish picked this upset that rocked the football world. And the late Bob Peck, twice all-America center, would have been tickled, too, for of Bob the erstwhile Little Irish, who was graduated from the evening economics course at Pitt in 1922, says:

"We were THAT close—we used to shoot crap for nickels."

Sport Vignettes

When is a safety not a safety, or when is a safety a touchback, or vice versa, and what's it all about?

In two major games last Saturday, almost the identical play occurred, and in one it was ruled a safety and in the other a touchback.

At the Stadium here, late in the first period, Mike Sebastian, of Pitt, muffed a Notre Dame punt and played tag with the ball and followed it over the goal line and was downed trying to run it out. Almost everybody but the officials thought it was a safety, since the impetus which sent the ball behind the goal seemingly came from the receiver, but it was ruled a touchback.

In the Princeton-Michigan game at Ann Arbor, Bales, of Princeton, followed a punt behind his goal line and was downed trying to run the ball out. Ruling: A safety. In this instance, Bales did not touch the ball as it bounded over the goal. This should have been a touchback, according to the rules, which say:

"It is a touchback when a kicked ball (other than one from kickoff, free kick or one which later scores a goal from the field) goes over the goal line before being touched by a player of either team and strikes the ground, a player or any obstruction on, above or behind the goal line."

Also:

"It is a touchback if a player on defense permits a ball kicked by an opponent to touch his person and it then rolls across his goal line and is declared dead in his end zone in possession of any member of his team, or if the ball goes out of bounds from his end zone following such a play. It is NOT a touchback if such player JUGGLES the ball so that he in any way forces it over the line and he or any player of his team then recovers it."

Believe it or not, but Izzy Weinstock, the Pitt fullback, who has missed his last five straight free-point tries against the Army and two against Notre Dame, booted safely seven times in his first nine tries this season.

Because of the three ties in their record, the Ohio State players now are being referred to as the Buck-ties, instead of the Buckeyes.

PAPER URGES GRID PAYROLL

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(Universal)—Open payment of football players is advocated by Columbia Spectator, the student daily. In its leading editorial it stated its credo for the conduct of athletics at Columbia and its reasons for initiating an inquiry. It reads:

"Payment to and favoritism toward football players is natural under the present system. Football players at present do not get adequate return for the time and effort expended and the hardships endured. If it is necessary to continue the present system we would advocate open remuneration of football players to an extent commensurate with their services to the university, and open recognition of football as a paid advertising medium.

"Intercollegiate football should be brought down to a sane level and to its proper place in collegiate life."

Spectator also asked for a fair hearing to establish the truth or falsity of allegations made concerning Columbia football.

SMITH BEATS WILLIS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Jimmy Smith, Philadelphia middleweight, battered his way to a 10-round decision over Cowboy Jack Willis, of California, in the feature bout of a boxing card here last night. Willis was down once in the third round and again in the tenth, but did not take a count. Smith weighed 156½, Willis 157.

SOCCER TEAMS ADVANCE

Greenfield and McCleary qualified to meet for the championship of Section II of the trade school soccer league yesterday. Greenfield defeated Swissheim, 1-0, while McCleary defeated Fort Pitt, 1-0.

IRISH PLAYERS ARE FLAYED, DEMOTED

Three men were missing from the regulars' lineup—Capt. Paul Host, end; Nick Luckats, left halfback, and Ben Alexander, center. Moved from the second team to fill their places were Hugh Devore, Mike Koken and Kitty Gorman.

That's just a start, Coach Anderson threatened. There will be other shakeups if the team doesn't capitalize upon its potential power. He said:

"We've got a lot of good material, and I'm going to find out just who wants to get in there and fight."

Revamping of the lineup gave fresh impetus to rumors that dissension had crept into the ranks of the regulars, and that Coach Anderson's action was taken to present a team in future grid engagements that, if beaten, could lay defeat solely upon the other team, not internal discord.

Some observers brought Coach Anderson in for some share of criticism in connection with the Pittsburgh upset; others attributed the defeat to "soft" early season schedule of the Ramblers.

If Coach Anderson makes good his threat, Notre Dame's future opponents may be introduced to some of the fourth and fifth squad talent at the school.

SANDLOT ELEVENS FACE TESTS SUNDAY

BIG TUSSLES CARDED FOR CONFERENCE

By TOM BIRKS

With the J. P. Rooneys clashing with West View at Greenlee Field, and the Olympics, of McKeesport, traveling to Bellaire to face the Eagles, fans in the district are offered a couple of interesting games again this weekend in the West Penn Conference.

The customers hardly could complain about the fare served up last Sunday, those who watched the Rooney-Bellaire battle still are talking about the hectic action.

ROONEYS FACE TEST

With such important tests ahead, the Conference elevens will rest this week, no night games being listed. The Rooneys are certain to be tested to the limit by West View, a team which has made the going tough for all opposition to date. If the Rooneys can win this one, they'll be practically "in" as champions once again. The Olympics must beat Bellaire to stay in the running, and will be in a swell spot to take advantage of any slip on the part of the Rooneys.

There is little doubt that Coach Hart Morris had the Buckeyes primed to the minute. Three times the Eagles forced their way within the Rooney 10-yard line. Once, with the ball on the two-yard line, the big Green line held for downs.

BATTLE MEMORABLE ONE

Wheeling fans stated that the game was the most terrific battle staged in the vicinity in years. After the game, Jess Quatse, Bucky Wagner, Honey Guarino and Jimmy Clark were entertained by their Pitt friends on the Bellaire club.

Next Sunday Bellaire is in for more excitement, because, with the Olympics in town, another tough game will be on tap.

HUSKERS POINT FOR PITT

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—When the present football season was in its inception Coach Dana X. Bible said the University of Nebraska Cornhuskers' schedule was too tough to "point" for a single game.

The critics are not disregarding his statement concerning the "pointing" but they are wondering if all possible preparedness and an instinctive desire to avenge a smarting defeat are not just about "pointing."

On November 12, Pittsburgh comes here for the annual Husker-Panther tangle.

George Sauer, Husker triple threat man and one of the best backs Nebraska has produced, was injured in the Minnesota game, and hasn't seen much service since. Corwin Hulbert, star tackle, has an infected arm and was not in the last game.

Coach Bible said today Sauer won't play against Iowa University at Iowa City Saturday, and that Hulbert probably will watch the game from the sidelines. However, the team physician has declared Sauer is ready to go, and Hulbert is expected to be in prime fettle by the end of the week.

After experimenting with the backfield, Coach Bible said today a new combination will be tried against the Hawkeyes. It will be Masterson, Fahrnbruck, Mathis and Boswell.

It's no secret around the Nebraska camp that the Huskers have been looking forward to the Pittsburgh game. It's less a secret how they would like to avenge the defeat of a year ago, and humble Pittsburgh just as the Panthers did Notre Dame last Saturday.

BUTCH PONDERS STYLE CHANGE

is The southpaw bantamweight, of Oakland, has been working out as a right-handed boxer in the gymnasium and may try it out in his next fight, which likely will be in Toronto, Canada, Friday night of next week. After that he may take a trip to California, where his manager, Jack London, has been promised a string of bouts.

Inability to get enough work to keep him busy because good opponents shun southpaws is the reason Butch is planning to become one of the "regular fellers" of the ring.

Between Rounds

Jack London also is handling Red Bush, the Cumberland middleweight, who knocked out Ray Jennings in a punch at the Arena last week. Bush will show here again next week.

The Jimmy Thorrnas-Eugene Huat bout scheduled at Motor Square Garden next Monday night may be pulled out and the date, like that of last night, kept a blank except for the marathon dance.

George Engle, who managed both Frank Klaus and Harry Greb when they held the world middleweight title, will be in Tony Falco's corner when the Philadelphian meets Johnny Datto in the windup at the Arena, Friday night. This will be Falco's first fight under Engle's wing.

The card has been completed for the Arena show Friday night, with Al Farone, of McKees Rocks, meeting Johnny Catalino, of Oakland, in the second bout and Elmer Kozak, of Rankin, boxing Johnny Duson, of Oakland, in the opener. Frankie Goosby, local Negro middleweight, and Paul Delaney, of New York, are in the first 10-round bout.

There is talk of Jack Dempsey serving as referee in an amateur show at the Arena Wednesday night of next week and also in a professional show there two nights later.

That Irish Influence

SCOOP! . . . JOCK SUTHERLAND CAUGHT SMILING . . . SCOOP!

You'd smile, too, if you were the coach of the Pitt team which had just beaten a highly-touted Notre Dame eleven. They say Jock is a Scotchman who seldom smiles, but he'll do so any time under that Irish influence. Right now he's busy denying rumors that he's to leave Pitt to become head coach at Yale. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

TUNNEY TALKS ON BOXING

By WARREN BROWN
Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Politics, not prize-fighting (boxing to him), brought Gene Tunney back today to the city that was the scene of one of his greatest adventures.

The smartest of all the heavyweight champions—he knew when to get out of the game and stay out—is very Democratic, this visit.

He finds politics interesting, he says. He said more about politics, but I seem to have forgotten what it was.

He talked of fights and heavyweights. He talked of the depression.

When it was suggested that the depression had reached its greatest depth when Jack Sharkey became heavyweight champion, Tunney disagreed. He said:

"Jack should capitalize on the title before that. But then I suppose he doesn't have to worry about his capital. He has been very careful with what he has made."

The former champion said he had a very miserable time of it during his recent illness. He said:

"I was on my back for 10 days, and that's my idea of a real long count."

Tunney expressed a little disappointment that no one has written a story recently about his "return" to the ring. He commented:

"That one comes up about once a year, and it's about due any day now."

Comish Summons Matmen, Referee

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Jim Londos, claimant of the world wrestling title, and Referee Ben Paul, who officiated in the contest here last Friday between Londos and Joe Stecher, mid-Western scissors king, have been summoned by the State Athletic Commission for a hearing at its next session. The investigation was demanded by Stecher, who accused Londos of "foul and unfair tactics," in their match here, which Paul awarded to Londos.

Stecher was so angered by Londo's tactics and the refusal of Referee Paul to heed his protests that he refused to accept one cent of his purse and complained so long and loudly that Commissioner Robert Nelson finally ordered a hearing of all parties concerned.

Ross to Battle Hess in Chicago

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Barney Ross, Chicago's up and coming lightweight contender, will meet Goldie Hess, of Los Angeles, at the Chicago Stadium November 11. The match will be 10 rounds at 136 pounds.

HOCKEY HEADS AMEND RULES

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Hold-outs in the National Hockey League now are faced with the threat of suspension unless they come to terms.

Under a new rule adopted at a meeting of the directors here yesterday, President Frank Calder was empowered to suspend any holdout if, in his opinion, the terms offered are fair.

The most important change in the rules called for a reduction from 15 to 14 in the number of players in uniform for each club and an increase in the minimum from eight to 10.

A player with a broken stick who kicks the puck hereafter will be assessed a minor penalty, under terms of an amendment adopted at the meeting.

Players shooting the puck down the ice for defensive purposes, will be assessed a minor penalty if they lift it from the playing surface into the spectators. A match penalty will be meted out for any player kicking, or attempting to kick, another player. The delayed penalty rule which permits a substitute to be used by any team already having two men in the penalty box was amended so that none of the penalized players can return to the ice until play has been stopped and the substitute players removed. The penalty for violation was fixed at a major.

Title Swim Meet At K.A.C. Tomorrow

The local indoor swimming season gets under way tomorrow night in the Keystone A. C. pool, with several A. M. A. titles at stake.

A heavy entry list, including many out-of-town swimmers, assures close competition. Titles will be decided in the 50-yard free style for men; 50-yard free style for women, and the 100-yard senior A. M. A. free style for men.

Grid Injury Proves Fatal to Hawaiian

HONOLULU, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Stephen Tyau, 16, died last night of a fractured skull suffered in sandlot football a few hours earlier.

Tyau's death was the second here this season. Frederick Winstedt, 18 high school player, died October 9 of a cerebral hemorrhage, an injury received in practice.

Fight Results

At Newark, O.—Cliff Cassidy and Nordi Smith drew, 8 rounds; Tiger Walker defeated Dudley Ring, 6 rounds; Young Walcot knocked out Cocky McDonald, 1 round.

MARTINSBURG WINS

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 1.—Martinsburg moved a notch closer to the independent football championship of the tri-state district by annexing its fifth consecutive victory of the season at the expense of the Winchester, Va., team, 18 to 0.

A movement is on foot among the executives of many of our small colleges to cancel games of long standing with the big schools and play only schools in their own football class.

W. A. Alexander

It is true that it does not do a small school squad much good to take a bad beating from one of the big teams, and if the schedule calls for two or three such games then it is entirely unfair to the players. One important athletic principle, however, has been overlooked in saying that a team should stick in its own class. No individual or team can improve unless it has an occasional contest with an opponent who is stronger and knows more about the game.

What up-and-coming young golfer or tennis player would not welcome the chance to play with Bobby Jones or Bill Tilden. They would know that, barring an accident, they would be defeated, but they also would recognize that they were bound to gain experience that would be of unquestionable aid later on.

The college baseball teams always like to have a go with one of the big league teams in the early spring. The boys do not mind the licking, because they have the opportunity of watching an expert in each position.

BIG TEAM TAKES CHANCE

The big school football team also takes a chance when it schedules the small school. They have nothing to gain and everything to lose so far as the outcome is concerned.

If Yale had defeated Bates, 50 to 0, it would have caused no comment, but the score, Yale 0, Bates 0, was broadcast from one end of the nation to the other, and nothing very complimentary was said about Yale. The game, however, will probably have a beneficial effect on the Yale players for their later big games.

The small school safely can schedule games with the big boys if it will adhere to one or two safe principles.

Don't sign up for more than a year at a time, and avoid the big schools and coaches who delight in piling up the score.

SHORT CONTRACT BEST

By signing only one-year contracts the small team can avoid a contest in those years when they know in advance that their team will be very inexperienced and poor. This will suit the major opposition, as no coach wants a game where the opposition is too weak. The small school in years when its team looks good can find plenty of the big teams who will be glad to have an experience game and who will not attempt to murder the opposition if the affair becomes one-sided.

A coach does not hold the score within reason by telling his players to let up, or not to try and score. This would not be fair to either his own boys or the visitors. The coach, however, can use the game to find out something about the poorer players on his squad, and he also can limit his attack to a few simple plays and can instruct his quarterback to kick often and let the opposition have the ball.

STARS RESUME CUE DUELS

Billy Greenwood meets Joe Mackin, of McKeesport at 1:30; Mackin takes on Charles Seaback, of New York, at 3:30; William Kish plays Greenwood at 7:30, and Seaback faces Harry Oswald at 9:30 in today's program of the Western division of the Eastern section elimination tournament for the right to compete for the national three-cushion billiard championship in New York next week. The matches are being held in the Crookston rooms, East Liberty, and will be concluded Thursday.

In the opening matches yesterday, Greenwood defeated Harry Oswald, 50 to 45; Mackin defeated Kish, 50-48; Seaback defeated Kish, 50-42, and Oswald won over Mackin, 50-35.

Oswald had the highest run of the day, a run of eight in his match with Greenwood, which was completed in 60 innings. Greenwood, Mackin and Kish each had high runs of six, while Oswald ran seven in his winning match against Mackin.

The Kish-Mackin match yesterday was the best of the day. Kish led 48 to 44 in the one hundred and eighteenth inning, only to have Mackin step up and run off six in the next frame to win the match.

DOG TEST POSTPONED

ROCKVILLE, Md., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—A driving rain during the morning caused the cancellation of the second day's program of the National Foxhunters' Association meet. The second division of the $1,000 twelfth chase futurity will be held tomorrow morning and completed Thursday afternoon.

BRITISH BOXER TO U. S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Nel Tarleton, British featherweight champion, will sail for New York in two weeks for American appearances, it was announced today.

GRINS From the GRID

By O. W. (Red) Severence

No. 19.

Notre Dame football teams for the past several years have been more than outstanding. Naturally the players have been a little cocky over their ability.

Well might they have been. This cockiness not only was noticeable among the first and second teams, but also was prominent among the third-stringers.

In the opening game with Indiana last year, the first and second teams had taken it rather easy and had a three-touchdown lead. As the game was nearly over, Coach Hunk Anderson sent in his third-string team.

One of the line men, a guard, 5 foot 7 and not much over 150 pounds in weight, looked up at his Hoosier opponent at the beginning of the first play and said:

"Say, it's a good thing for you guys we didn't start this game!"

And believe me, in three plays this third-string team had scored a fourth touchdown and kicked the extra point.

Packers Defense Figures Best

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The champion Green Bay Packers are the best defensive outfit in the National Professional Football League.

The Packers have permitted the opposition to gain only 899 yards in seven games, an average of slightly more than 128 yards per game. Second place in this division of play belongs to the Chicago Cardinals, who have allowed 746 yards in five games, an average of 149. The weakest team in this respect has been Brooklyn, with an average of 230 yards per game.

Brown Stops Perez In Title Battle

MANCHESTER, England, November 1.—(AP.)—Jackie Brown, British titleholder, stopped Young Perez, of France, recognized in some quarters as the world flyweight king, in the thirteenth round of a scheduled 15-round championship bout here last night.

Perez was so badly battered his seconds tossed in the towel.

CARNERA TO BOX

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight, today agreed to box Marty Gallagher, Washington, in a bout in Baltimore November 16.

COACH'S FIELD 'PHONE SCORED AS UNETHICAL

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—A red-hot controversy flared within the Big Ten Conference today over the system of telephone communication between assistant coaches in the press box and on the players' bench during games.

The principals in this dispute were Coach Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, who upheld the use of the private telephone, and Frank McCormick, athletic director of the University of Minnesota, who decried the practice as unethical.

At Minneapolis McCormick declared he will protest to Northwestern University authorities against the telephone device.

At Evanston Hanley retorted that the use of private telephones by members of the coaching staff was a practice of long standing and implied no lack of ethics.

The controversy was engendered by McCormick's discovery of the telephoning system at Minneapolis last Saturday while the Gophers were conquering the Wildcats, 7 to 0. Immediately after discovering it, McCormick, who is serving his first year as athletic director, ordered the wires disconnected during the last period of the game just before Minnesota scored its touchdown.

No ruling, covering the use of this type of communication during a game exists in the Big Ten Conference, but McCormick's action in bringing the issue to the forefront may stir up debate on the advisability of such a regulation.

Presidents Point For Duquesne Game

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 1.—Washington and Jefferson College grid athletes return to Pittsburgh, for the second time this year, on Saturday for a resumption of gridiron relations with Duquesne University.

Memories of a 12-6 defeat at the hands of the Dukes here in 1928, the last time the schools met, and a victory that was achieved by a forward pass as the final whistle blew, have served to stimulate the Presidents in their preparation for the approaching struggle.

Tony Rosso, Pittsburgher, was one of the Presidents' outstanding backs in the Lafayette game and his work in subbing for the absent Al Rometo may land him a starting assignment against Duquesne.

Coal Trade Retains Large Volume Of Sales

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

COAL PRODUCTION has more than doubled since the early part of July. With only minor interruptions the trend of output has been upward since that time.

As a result of this revival in demand, a major share of mines in this and other districts are operating from four to six days a week.

The expanded production has materially helped coal companies and coal miners, but prices have not reflected the increased purchases.

While the leading coal producers in this district are working at from 70 to 75 per cent of capacity, it still is doubtful if any properties are making money if full charges are being made for depreciation and depletion.

Many Mines Working On Full-Time Basis

A MAJOR SHARE of the mines which are in production are working on a full-time basis. The Pittsburgh Coal Company is working its active mines on a six-day week. After deducting the capacity of the idle mines this leaves the company with operations at 75 per cent of capacity.

Carnegie Coal Company mines are working five days a week. Clairton Coal is working six days a week.

The revival in activity is entirely attributable to the fact that both industrial and household consumers came to the fall period with empty bins. In addition little coal moved to lake ports during the summer. At present there is a rush to move coal to the lake docks.

Output Takes Upward Trend

COAL OUTPUT reached its low point for the depression in the week ended July 9 when only 3,592,000 tons were produced. Ordinarily this is the seasonal low point of the year. Output, however, compared with 5,961,000 tons in the corresponding period of 1931. This was a decline of 39.2 per cent.

Since that time production has shown an almost unbroken gain. It reached 7,888,000 tons in the week ended October 15. This compared with 8,145,000 tons in the corresponding week of last year and represented a decline of only 3.2 per cent.

In the week ended October 22 some ground was lost with a production of 7,800,000 tons; this compared with 8,144,000 tons a year ago or a decline of 4.2 per cent. In other words coal output has been close to the levels of this time in 1931. In fact, officials of the Pittsburgh Coal Company expect their October production figures to reach 1,000,000 tons and to aqueal the output of the corresponding month of last year.

Activity Expected During November

COAL MEN ARE of the opinion that the present rate of activity will continue during most of November. Many mines have their production sold through the first 20 days of the month. After that time lake business will be at an end and demand will be dependent to a major extent on weather conditions.

Prices are at practically their depression low levels. Lump coal is quoted at about $1.35 a ton at the mines. Slack prices show wide variations. Some has moved at as high a price as 45 cents a ton with a small amount of distress slack as low as 20 cents.

SAME DIVIDEND ON CHRYSLER

DETROIT, Nov. 1.—The Chrysler Corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, payable December 31 to record of December 1.

The earnings report for the September quarter shows net loss of $5,346,146, compared with net profit of $1,186,052 in the preceding 3 months and net profit of $1,518,966 in the third quarter of 1931. Loss for the third quarter was after depreciation, interest, federal taxes, etc.

For nine months ended September 30, net loss was $6,226,578, after depreciation, interest, federal taxes, etc., compared with net profit of $3,771,002, equal to 85 cents a share on 4,414,922 shares in the first nine months of 1931.

During the first nine months of this year, sales to distributors and dealers of the corporations automobiles, trucks and other products, totaled 174,530 units, to a value of $110,555,859. This compares with 243,251 units, valued at $162,410,520 in the like period of last year.

Milk Price Cut Cent At Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The price of milk in Philadelphia today dropped one cent to nine cents a quart and five cents a pint. Prices paid producers were cut from $2.40 per hundredweight to $2.18.

Dr. Clyde L. King, who acted as arbitrator, said that lower consumption and increased production made the reduction necessary.

STOCKS SLUMP IN LISTLESS MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—A rather decided downward drift developed in an extremely sluggish stock market today.

Trading continued around the smallest volume in recent years, but in view of the paralysis of buying, scattered selling was enough to reduce prices by 1 to nearly 4 points in spots. The list recovered a little at times, but rallies failed to hold. Renewed heaviness of wheat was evidently a bearish factor in stocks.

Preliminary estimates of last week's crude oil production indicated a substantial drop in the flow, as a result of curtailment in Texas and California. Ordering of the regular 25 cent dividend, and the usual extra of like amount, by Standard of New Jersey, was a reassuring development, but had been anticipated. It was partly offset by Socony-Vacuum's ordering of a payment of only 10 cents, against 20 cents three months ago. Earnings statements of the oil companies, however, continue to show small profits, in contrast to large deficits a year ago. Continental Oil Company of Delaware reported net equal to 7 cents a share for the September quarter, in contrast to a deficit of $2,955,322 in the like period of 1931.

Most brokerage quarters thought the poor third quarter earnings reports had been largely discounted. Oils appeared to be the only major group showing marked improvement, although the complete third quarter of the railroads promise to show fair gains in spots. Even the utilities are showing some rather substantial accessions in net. Consolidated Gas of New York reported third quarter net of only 37 cents a share, against 49 cents in the like period of 1931.

Selling of the rails appeared to be based on the belief that the seasonal upturn in the movement of freight had reached its peak in the week ended October 15. The last two months of the year normally see a considerable tapering off. Santa Fe, first of the larger trunklines to report for the week ended October 27, showed a decline of 2,270 cars from the period ended October 22.

Ordering of the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share by Chrysler late yesterday, while reporting a deficit of roughly $5,300,000 for the third quarter, strengthened the belief in Wall street that General Motors would order its regular dividend of 25 cents at the directors' meeting tomorrow. On September 30, last, General Motors had cash and marketable securities amounting to $209,000,000, and the quarterly dividend requires roughly, $10,800,000.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Westvaco Chlorine Products Corporation and subsidiaries report for the quarter ended September 30, 1932, net profit of $100,628 after interest, depreciation, federal taxes, etc., equivalent after dividend requirements on 7 per cent preferred stock to 22 cents a share on 284,962 no-par shares of common stock. This compares with $87,532 or 10 cents a share in preceding quarter and $134,321 or 33 cents a share in quarter ended September 26, 1932. For the nine months ended September 30, 1932, net profit amounted to $277,206 after charges and taxes, equal to 37 cents a share on common, comparing with $511,004 or $1.39 a share for the nine months ended September 26, of previous year.

American Light and Traction Company for 12 months ended September 30 net income after all charges, subsidiary preferred dividends, minority interest, taxes, etc., equal after dividends on 6 per cent preferred to $2.43 a share, par $25, on common against $2.95 in same 12 months in 1931. For September quarter equivalent 43 cents on common against 64 cents in preceding quarter and 63 cents in September, 1931, quarter.

Magma Copper Company reports for quarter ended September 30, 1932, shows loss of $116,413 after shut-down, expenses, etc. In the preceding quarter loss was $7,490 after expenses and depreciation, and disregarding federal taxes, and in the third quarter of 1931 loss was $91,755. For nine months to September 30, last, loss amounted to $14,670 after expenses and depreciation and disregarding federal taxes, compared with profit of $95,045 in the first nine months of 1931.

Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company and associated companies for nine months ended September 30, 1932, reports consolidated net profit of $12,230,063, equal, after preferred dividends, to $4.20 a share on 1,805,000 outstanding shares of common stock. This compares with a net profit of $14,524,355 for the corresponding 1931 period or $6 a share on the common.

Vulcan Detinning Company for quarter ended September 30 shows net income of $33,648 after depreciation, taxes, etc., against $60,796 in the third quarter, 1931. Nine months' net income totals $89,823, compared with $212,494 in the like 1931 period.

Continental Oil Company of Delaware and subsidiaries report for quarter ended September 30, 1932, consolidated net income of $358,451 after taxes, intangible development costs, depletion, depreciation, interest and minority interests equal to 7 cents a share on 4,738,593 shares, as against net income of $1,616,346, or 34 cents a share in the preceding quarter, and net loss of $2,955,322 in the third quarter, 1931. Nine months' consolidated net income amounts to $101,949, equal to 2 cents a share, compared with net loss of $9,484,163 in the first nine months of 1931.

Consolidated Gas Company of New York and affiliated companies for 12 months ended September 30, last, shows net income of $61,626,638 after depreciation, taxes and interest, equal after allowing for dividends of affiliated companies and on Consolidated Gas $5 preferred to $4.36 a share on 11,476,904 shares of common, compared with $70,159,199, or $5.09 a share on 11,475,795 common shares for 12 months, ended September 30, 1931. For September quarter, net income amounted to $7,216,766, equal to 37 cents a common share, against $8,064,334, or 49 cents a common share, in the third quarter, 1931.

Wilcox Rich Corporation, subsidiary of Eaton Manufacturing Company, reports for September quarter net loss of $34,099 after taxes, depreciation and dividend requirements on Class A shares. This compares net with surplus of $10,284 in the preceding quarter and net loss of $18,315 in the third quarter of 1931.

Truscon Steel Company report for quarter ended September 30, last, shows net loss of $80,585 after depreciation, taxes, etc., compared with net loss of $173,736 in the preceding quarter and net loss of $389,303 in the first quarter this year.

Indian Motorcycle Company and subsidiaries for nine months, ended September 30, last, report net loss of $94,039 after depreciation and other charges as against net loss of $73,187 in the first nine months of 1931. September quarter net loss was $50,049 as against net loss of only $3,098 in the June quarter and net loss of $44,763 in the third quarter, 1931.

Baldwin Locomotive Works for 12 months ended September 30, 1932, shows net loss of $4,311,924, after all charges including depreciation, interest, and Midvale Company minority interest. This compares with net loss for 12 months ended June 30, last, of $4,214,862. Net loss for fiscal year ended December 31, 1931, was $4,122,759.

Allegheny Steel Company report for quarter ended September 30, 1932, shows net loss of $288,903, after expenses and depreciation. This compares with net loss of $170,786 in the preceding quarter on the same basis.

BANK REFORM ACTION SEEN BY CONGRESS

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Banking reform will doubtless come up again as a principal matter before the attention of Congress. A Democrat, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, has prepared a revised bill, which entails many of the suggestions of the Federal Reserve officials and President Hoover in his Indianapolis speech last Friday night tried to avoid letting the opposition seize the issue by again demanding a better banking system.

Mr. Rukeyser

The President suggests that the American people "be relieved from conditions which permit the credit machinery of the country to be made available without adequate check for wholesale speculation in securities, with its ruinous consequences to millions of our citizens and to national economy."

CREDIT POLICY SIFTED

Is the President's view sound from a banking standpoint? Can speculative crazes, which are deep seated human phenomena, be obviated by changes in the banking law? Numerous politicians in both parties profess to believe that they can, but banking specialists are skeptical. The experts for the most part contend that credit cannot be placed in separate compartments, one marked "for business," the other "for speculation." They argue that the Federal Reserve can influence speculation chiefly by affecting the total supply of credit and the price of funds for all purposes.

Some argue that, in making credit very dear when speculation threatens to get out of hand, it may be possible to check the speculative wave before business has had time to be hurt much by the rise in interest rates. In the last boom the Federal Reserve sidestepped, trying in 1929 to keep money cheap for business but dear for speculation. It raised discount rates and issued warnings, but it did not act promptly or vigorously enough.

BOARD STAND CITED

Before the emotionalism of the campaign or the existing economic distress, the Federal Reserve Board in its annual report for 1928 expressed substantial disagreement with the idea that loans for speculation can readily be outlawed. The board said:

"Influence exerted by a reserve bank on the loan and investment policy of an individual member bank is ordinarily exercised only over banks that are borrowers from the reserve banks. It is in the nature of banking supervision, and is akin in many respects to the bank examination function of the Reserve System. This phase of reserve bank policy may be called banking policy, as distinguished from credit policy, which deals with more general developments of banking in relation to the credit needs of the country. Banking policy ordinarily has but limited effect on credit conditions as a whole, because no class of borrowers is confined for accommodation to a single bank or group of banks, and because of the general mobility of bank credit. When one member bank, for example, on its own initative or at the instance of the reserve bank, repays indebtedness to the reserve bank by withdrawing funds lent on the stock exchange, the effect may be to cause the borrower to seek accommodation at another bank, member or non-member, that is not indebted to the reserve bank. For the purpose of meeting the demand thus transferred without borrowing at the reserve bank, the bank to which the borrower applies may borrow from a member bank, which in turn may borrow from the reserve bank. As a result of this series of transactions there would be no reduction in security loans or in the borrowings at the reserve bank.

"Credit policy is essentially personal and finds expression chiefly through the influence that the Federal Reserve System may exert on the volume and cost of bank credit through its policy of sales or purchases in the open market and through discount rates on member bank borrowings and buying rates on acceptances."

4TH DISTRICT BUSINESS UP

CLEVELAND, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—An uptrend in general business, the first in four seasons, was noted today in the Fourth Federal Reserve district by the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland.

Improvement in general business, the bank stated in its monthly review, continued for the latter part of September and the first half of October both in the Fourth district and the entire country.

The expansion in most lines, the report said, was greater than seasonal and was encouraging since, at this time in the three preceding depression years, the trend of general business was downward despite the fact that there is usually some improvement in the fall.

THREE WOMEN

By FAITH BALDWIN

Mrs. Sheldon Pleased When Her Secret Plans Seem To Be Successful

CHAPTER XI.

Louisa let the guide books go, this time. She permitted them to guide each other, in Venice, in Paris, through the Black Forest, with a long stay in England to end it all. Elizabeth and Lennox were in each other's company almost constantly.

Now they were coming home again with their memories. They were walking along the white decks together, they were lying in their steamer chairs, watching the peacock swell of the water, they were saying, "Do you remember?"

Lennox turned his eyes from the horizonless ocean to the girl. She was slender and trim in a Peter Thomson skirt and blouse, the silken ends of her sailor-knotted tie flying. It was an unseasonably warm day in early October. Under the stiff brim of her sailor hat her fine hair curled and cast little, moving shadows on the cheeks that were warm, rosy brown from sun and fog and salt winds. She smiled at him, happily, and spoke—

To his blank astonishment he did not understand a word she was saying. He was looking at her, he was hearing her voice, yet words had for him, instantly, no meaning.

"Are you deaf or day-dreaming?" she asked, laughing.

"Did you say something? I didn't hear."

FLEES FROM LENNOX

She raised her eyes to his then. For a moment they stared, tranced. Was it revelation, or was it knowledge of something that they had always known and had never until this moment interpreted?

Elizabeth went red, went white. Stumblingly she came to her feet, dropping the plaid rug.

"I——"

She never made the frantic excuse. She fled along the deck and he made no move to follow her. He sat there, straightly, his hands clasped, hard, on his knees, and pursued with his bewildered eyes the advancing line of the waves.

Two years—and he had not known! But had he not?

Elizabeth went to her cabin and threw herself, face downward, on the narrow berth. For the moment, she had no hold on reality, she had no sense of being herself, a person, an entity. She was as fluid as the water beneath the straining decks, she was as molten as the light which the moon would spill presently, across the sea, she was as tremulous as the newest star in strange heavens.

Two years—and she had not known! But had she not?

There was a step in the passage, halting at her door. A knock. She sat up, pushing the tumbled hair from her eyes, said—and wondered that her voice was still her voice—"Come in."

Mrs. Sheldon entered, closed the door behind her, stood with her hand on the knob, very erect. Her eyes rested a moment, with disapproval, upon the sailor hat, rolling across the floor where Elizabeth had flung it, spinning almost hoop-like to the motion of the boat.

Louisa released her hold on the knob, picked up the hat, laid it carefully away without comment. As she did so, she asked, "You are not well, Elizabeth?"

"Yes; oh yes."

Well! She had never been as well in her life, as strong, as buoyant. And yet she was ill—ill with sudden fevers, with uncontrollable shivering, with the evanescent aching of an old wound that had been dealt her long ago and which now troubled her for the first time.

Mrs. Sheldon asked evenly: "You and Lennox have not quarreled, have you?"

"Why—no——" the girl stammered, sitting upright now, supporting herself on palms laid flatly on the berth: "why, no—what makes you ask?"

"Nothing," Louisa assured her. "I wondered, that is all. I found him alone on deck; he answered me rather brusquely when I asked him where you were."

She looked at Elizabeth a moment and left her without another word.

Elizabeth lay down again. It was nearing tea time, she knew. But her limbs were leaden, abruptly. She turned her face to the wall and began to cry. She felt alone. She was lost, lost to the world she had known, lost to herself. She had no one whom she might turn, of whom she might ask why? and again what does it mean?

Lennox. She couldn't go out again, she couldn't face him, she couldn't encounter his eyes. She thought, childishly, desperately, that she would stay where she was, in the little cabin, until they should land. She planned carefully. I'll ask to go home again. Home! Surely that was the solution, back to the house which had taken on such shabbiness in her memory and which now seemed so unutterably safe.

She sprang up from the berth and swaying with the veiled motion of the boat, began to order her hair. She could not live, she was not living, until she saw him again. Hurry, Elizabeth, hurry!—warned her heart—you might die before you reach him—he might die—the ship might go down—wait, Elizabeth, wait!—whispered her terror.

She went out of the cabin, straight to the sheltered part of the deck where their chairs were, where tea would be served them. She found Louisa and Lennox together, not talking. She sat down between them, sedately, and presently drank the tepid tan fluid from the thick cup the steward gave her, answering when one or the other spoke to her.

Only when Lennox took the cup from her and his hand touched hers in passing, did her flesh betray her. She thought, bewildered—But I touch him every day—his hand, his arm, his sleeve—and it has never been like this. Yet, had it not?

After dinner, which was followed by a dull concert, he came to her.

"We'll walk on deck," he said.

Yes, but they walked on deck every night until bedtime. She looked fleetingly toward Louisa who sat in the small salon knitting something. Louisa nodded, as she always did. They left the lighted, crowded room together.

Louisa Sheldon looked after them. She thought she knew toward what significant hour they had set their faces. She did not know.

She dropped a stitch, picked it up, counted, half aloud. She said to herself, its done.

IS CONTEMPTUOUS

She relaxed, a very little. Two years. Two years of constant, tactful waiting and planning. How easy it had been! How obvious the trap! How simple!

Her thin lips narrowed, shrank back in scorn.

She thought—they think themselves in love, they fancy it fate. "Two shall meet." It is not fate, it is I—I—

She had no feeling for Elizabeth Howland save the half contemptuous affection one allots to a good, volitionless instrument.

The surety with which she had put her hand to the loom almost frightened her for a moment. It was as she had known it would be when she sat down before an old secretary and stared at a sheet of paper and twisted her pen in long, firm fingers. Lennox would marry. Better to marry than to burn. Lennox would beget strong, laughing children. He would think that he had married Elizabeth. But he would not have done so. His mother would have married him to this unimportant vessel.

She tried to turn her mind back to her knitting, her counting. But her thoughts were beyond her control. Those two, out on deck, they would be love-making now. The term arrested her. Make love. Manufacture it. That was what she had done.

There was silly moonlight, silly starshine over the water now. The proper setting. Presently they would come in and tell her, sentimental and shy. And she must be mildly astonished.

She wished that they would come. She could not endure to think of them now, to visualize. It was nothing but, she assured herself, a conventional enough moment, the thing children called romance, the thing which was really propinquity and moonlight and a clever stage director.

But she wished it were over—10 years over.

Her lips moved. She was counting stitches.

They were out there together and she could not follow them. They stood beside the rail, having forgotten her. That part of the deck was deserted, a lifeboat cast a dark shadow. Elizabeth looked out across the waves. She thought of something, she wished to ask—Do you remember?—and she could not think what it was she had remembered. Her hand lay on the rail, a small hand.

Lennox touched it with his own. "Elizabeth!" he said, quite loudly.

His tone gave the name all the quality of exclamation. She turned. His hand on hers seemed a terrible thing. She twisted her own a little, let it lie quiet.

"I—what is it?" she asked.

He answered, staring at her. "But—you understand, don't you? I love you—I've loved you all along. Love me," he pleaded, flame-urgent, "love me, Elizabeth!"

He drew the hand he held against his heart. Slowly, beyond any amazement, she went to his arms.

She had a sense that she saw as never before, clearer, more sharply. The water, the small waves, the great waves, the churned, white foam, the remote moon and the silver shadows of her light, the shape of the breathing ship all about them, the bulk of the tarpaulined lifeboat.

She heard the engines, she felt the throb, the vibration under her feet. But now it was in her breast, throbbing, pulsing, now it was in her limbs, now her lips were beneath his lips.

She closed her eyes. She was like a fire that destroys itself with fire. She felt so intensely that all sensation vanished. She was dying a little death.

Synopsis

Mrs. Louisa Sheldon, aristocratic New York widow, concentrating all her efforts to bringing up her son, Lennox, now a Columbia student, decides that he must marry in a year or two after she discovers evidence that he had attended a party which included "girls of no advertised profession." The stern Louisa—first of the THREE WOMEN—feared her son might become, like his deceased father, a victim of wine and women. So she writes to her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ella Howland, of Boston, inviting her daughter, Elizabeth, to become a guest for an indefinite length of time. The invitation is accepted. At first Lennox does not take to Elizabeth, but later they begin to like each other.

Madge Gets Ready for Production of Her Play

The query as to whether Dicky had seen Lee Chow give me the letter from Hugh Grantland joined the one which had been running in my brain since the night of the party, as to whether he had kissed Edith upon the moonlit veranda. I was to mull over them for some time, although the quizzical, sardonic glances which Dicky gave me during the next few days made me quite sure that he had seen Lee Chow hand me the letter.

I found it to be a most innocuous document, however, when I finally got the chance to read it, which did not come until several hours after we were settled in the hotel overlooking Gramercy Park.

The letter was short and bore no salutation and no signature save the initial "H."

"There are few developments to report," it began. "Samuel Brixton is still at his camp, which he has left only to take his stepdaughter to Whitney Hall and his stepson back to Yale. Charles Owen left the camp, ostensibly for Philadelphia, two days after he left your home. I am in that city now—of course not in the same hotel, for it is not desirable that he should know I am here—but I am keeping track of him.

DESTROYS LETTER

"So far I have found nothing whatever in his actions to arouse suspicion; but the hotel in which he is staying is a queer place, although I can find nothing definite against it. I shall not leave the city, however, until he does, and I have a trusted man trailing Samuel Brixton's movements. Will advise you of any future developments.—H."

I read the letter through several times until I had committed it to memory, then I tore it into infinitesimal pieces and wrapping them in a small piece of newspaper thrust them into the waste basket, wondering if Hugh Grantland might not be wasting time in shadowing Owen at this time.

There was nothing to do but wait, however, and I knew that I felt much safer with the knowledge that Hugh was on the job. With that knowledge, and carrying always in my memory the Philadelphia address that Hugh had enclosed in the letter for me to use in case of emergency, I plunged into the whirl of preparation for the production of my play, on which Philip Veritzen had started.

I knew that he wished to complete the production of the play as soon as possible, but from his deliberation in selecting the cast one would have thought that he had an eternity in which to prepare for the premier.

But there came a day at last when all the roles were filled, and rehearsals began. Mr. Veritzen insisted that I be present at every rehearsal, but I think I should have begged for the privilege of attending them, even if he had tried to bar me from them.

DAYS SPEED BY

It was a most fascinating world—this behind-the-curtain existence which I had entered—and I loved every minute of it. I had no sense of eternity now. My days were so filled that I had no time even to think of the worries that had occupied my mind during the summer.

I was hard-hearted enough not to be affected at all by that knowledge. Noel and Mary to all appearances were more in love with each other than ever, and Philip Veritzen was either too busy with the production of my play to object to their close association, or else his experience with Avis Arlen had made him complaisant.

But I had no time even to speculate upon what lay behind his silence, and the days flew by with proverbial lightning swiftness.

It was at the end of the first week of rehearsal that Harry, Lillian, Dicky and I were sitting in the big living room of our suite after dinner when the telephone rang and Harry Underwood, who was nearest, took down the receiver. His face as always was a mask, but I saw his eyes flash involuntarily to Lillian, and then veil themselves as quickly.

I found myself shaking as with a chill, for there came to me in that moment the conviction that in that unrevealed telephone message lay justification for all the premonitions of evil which almost invariably come to me when I hear the sound of the telephone.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Ghosts, witches, goblins, masqueraders all in various costumes were seen in all sections of the city Saturday and it would have been a safe bet that most of them were either on the way to one of the meetings of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club or that they had already attended the meeting and were on their way home.

At the South Hills Theater the winner of the costume parade held at Saturday's meeting was Marie Jones, who received a sweater for having the best costume. Following the selection of the best costume Mary Jane Whipkey recited "Johnny of the Circus," which brought many laughs from the youngsters. Betty Lou Noland and Betty McCabe sang as a duet "I Don't Know Why I Love You Like I Do." These two girls proved the "hit" of the show, and rightly so, because Betty Lou is only 7 and Betty McCabe is only 10.

The usual program was eliminated at the Arsenal Theater Saturday on account of Halloween and the meeting was opened by the entire assembly singing several Halloween songs. Then came the pie-eating contest which was won by Joe Porcasi. Joe proved to be the fastest pie eater of the 10 boys who competed and was awarded a necktie. Bob Hill had the best pair of lungs in the balloon blowing contest and he was awarded a shirt. Janet Helger went home with a new doll because her Halloween costume was adjudged the prettiest. Roy DeLong is the proud owner of a new Scout knife for having the funniest costume.

STAGE SHOW

Then came the first part of the stage entertainment with Frankie Porter acting as master of ceremonies and opening the show by singing "Wonderful Mother of Mine." Sue Hamley, a very tiny tot, offered a tap dance which, considering her size and age, was really marvelous. Following Sue, Jean Lesnich sang one of those old-fashioned "Blues" songs. Dolly Colbert, of the Colbert Sisters, (no relation to Claudette, of movie fame), but known to many in this territory for her dancing ability, gave an exhibition of tap and acrobatic dancing that was great to watch, and she was justly rewarded with a generous amount of applause.

Sam the "Accordion Man," that little chap who is a member of the club, made his accordion do everything but talk and finished his part of the show by having everyone in the audience singing with him.

Then came Rhea! You ask, "Who is Rhea?" He's that well-known artist and comedian who while telling a story is drawing illustrations that make his funny story even funnier. His work Saturday brought many a laugh and howls of delight from the members present.

The members also enjoyed a one-act playlet by the stock company, but this will be reviewed later in the week.

IF WE'RE WRONG, SUE US

"I find that the average American woman, before she reaches the age of 30, is concerned only with sex and has alarmingly little to say."—Burrell Wight, English lecturer.

Visiting Englishmen, generally speaking
(And that's what they generally do over here),
Take great delight our noses in tweaking;
They give us inferior complexes queer.
What if our women are silent, but flirty,
Before they have reached the ripe age of thirty?
That's not a problem to worry this nation;
It's easily solved by a slight operation.
Take out her appendix and replace the divot,
Sew a few stitches, tape well and rivet—
A woman starts talking in low, then high gear
And keeps right on chattering, year after year.

SEPTEMBER

"President Hoover had, as overnight guest, Poet Christopher Morley. The President told Mr. Morley that the country needs a good poem to hearten the people."

OCTOBER

Salvage These Youths

Emergency Military Training Camps Would Help to Save Young Americans from Becoming Tramps.

According to a survey conducted by 30 national social service agencies, young Americans to the number of 200,000 are roaming the country today in search of food, clothing, shelter and an opportunity "to settle down and earn a living."

More than 100,000 of these jobless wanderers would be eligible, it is estimated, for admission to emergency citizens' military training camps.

Every state in the Union ought to welcome the opportunity to establish such a camp before winter sets in and salvage its future citizens before distress drives them from home and forces them to become hitch-hikers for charity.

Any state in the Union that requests Federal aid in the organization of winter emergency camps for its homeless youths should get it promptly.

The federal government is well able to provide organization plans for such camps and to co-operate with the National [illegible] and organized reserves in providing competent in[illegible]rs.

In past national emergencies the federal government has utilized its military establishment for relief work with excellent results.

In the present national emergency the War Department is well equipped to render through its corps area commanders north, east, south and west the practical aid which states would require to reclaim these jobless wanderers, most of whom would much prefer emergency training for citizenship in winter camps to hitch-hiking for charity.

Instead of waiting until next summer to conduct citizen's military training camps, the federal government should co-operate with the several states in launching these camps at the beginning of winter.

Admission to these camps should be limited to jobless and homeless youths under 21 years of age. And every state should seize the opportunity to establish such a camp forthwith and authorize its National Guard to assist the Regular Army and organized reserves in making these 48 emergency winter camps a respectable and useful refuge for hitch-hiking young America.

Hunting Season Opens

Care Must Be Taken to Keep a Healthful Sport from Being Marred by Accident.

The hunting season for rabbits, squirrels, grouse, pheasant, quail and certain other kinds of small game opened today, and an army of gunners took to the woods and fields.

Thirty thousand persons obtained hunting licenses in Allegheny County alone, hundreds of thousands in the rest of the state.

They will find good sport. Notwithstanding that more than 600,000 men and women go hunting in Pennsylvania every autumn, the game supply, thanks to a wise conservation policy, does not diminish. The number of rabbits bagged in 1930 was 3,068,019, and the number last year was 3,100,000. But they continue plentiful despite the heavy slaughter.

Tramping through woods and fields with gun and dog is healthful sport—but take care!

Seventy-two persons were killed and 367 wounded in hunting accidents in Pennsylvania last year. Of those killed 30 died of self-inflicted injuries and the remaining 42 of injuries inflicted by others.

Seven persons were shot, two fatally, in mistake for game. Two were mistaken for rabbits, two for groundhogs!

It is no defense to a homicide charge to say that one mistook the person shot for an animal. Moreover, the hunting regulations are strict in requiring that hunters shall not shoot at game of any kind unless it is plainly seen. It is even forbidden to shoot into squirrels' nests.

The next few weeks will be a trying period for farmers and other rural dwellers who object to the invasion of their lands by hunters. Sportsmen should be considerate of the farmers' rights, and keep in mind the regulation which prohibits the discharging of firearms, while hunting, within 150 yards of occupied dwellings or buildings used in connection with them, without the permission of the owner or tenant.

It is not necessary to trespass to enjoy a good day's hunting. There are large tracts of state land, some of it not far from Pittsburgh, where game is plentiful and hunters are welcome.

With good weather and the exercise of care the hunters should have splendid sport.

Fathers Interested, Too

They Pay the School Bills and Should See What They Are Getting in Return.

The Parent-Teacher Associations are the best agency through which the taxpayers can learn how the money that they pay for the maintenance of the public schools is spent.

But in some of the Parent-Teachers Associations it is only the mothers who have shown much interest.

Ingram fathers have been charged with indifference. To refute the charge that they do not care what the schools do, they have taken over the program for a meeting tonight and plan to stage a sketch in the school auditorium, with 50 in the cast.

They set a good example for fathers elsewhere. After all, it is the fathers, in most families, who pay the school taxes, and they should see what they are getting in return for their money.

Physics Aids History

Something New Is Revealed in the Search for Relics of Gen. Braddock with a Magnet.

Twentieth century efficiency appears in a dispatch from Uniontown telling of the successful search that is being made by historians in that vicinity for relics of Gen. Edward Braddock.

Physics has been pressed into the service of historical research, with good results.

There IS something new under the sun.

Equipped with an electro-magnetic device, operated under the direction of Dr. R. B. Abbott, of Purdue University, the researchers are re-tracing Braddock's trail. Thus far the magnet has found for them an 8-inch cannonball, a tomahawk head, a horseshoe, eight spokes from the wheel of a cannon carrier and 45 pieces of shot.

Such ingenuity commands respect.

Four-Cylinder Love

Women are incurable optimists. When a man begins telling a woman that he is "all through with love and women," she automatically reaches for her vanity case and puts on an extra coat of lipstick.

A "masterful man" is one who insists on eating something that he doesn't like, just because his wife tells him that it is bad for him.

These two-way marriages with loose ties and individual careers seldom work, because the secret of success in marriage is not mutual independence but perfect TEAM-WORK.

Charity covers a multitude of sins; and tenderness in a man throws a softening glamour over a lot of bad habits, and enables a woman to forgive him for almost anything.

There may be men who can bear great pain as stoically as a woman; but where will you find one who can bear a tight shoe or a starvation reducing diet with the same set smile?

One thing that keeps this old world going 'round is woman's undying faith that love will last—even though she knows that nothing else ever does.

A girl may know that a man would make her miserable for life if she married him; but, somehow, that never seems to console her for failing to GET him.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—In a venerable Wall street house the other day on a hasty errand I remained two hours to talk to a delightful financier of the old school. He sat at a roll-topped desk—why is it all of a sudden I have a pronounced distaste for glass-topped desks?—without a telephone.

He wore a seersucker coat, black bow hook-on tie and detachable barrel cuffs. His business has declined, but his personal fortune shrunk very little. His investments were solely in short-term government bonds and selected mid-town real estate. Any other investment he regarded as speculation.

He blamed America's woes on a national consciousness to prepare for the future instead of taking care of the present. He pointed out that America had had its lesson in this before. And then from a desk drawer he read a yellowed page from a monthly review of 1832. It said:

"Manufacture, aided by new inventions, went on with increased activity. The disproportion between the cost of production and the price of manufactured articles gave immense profits. Millions were added to the millions already invested in business.

"At length supply far exceeded demand. Warehouses of the world were filled. Prices suddenly fell to half. Multitudes were ruined. Thousands of families reduced to beggary. Some retained part of their work at reduced wages, but most of them were discharged."

What an accurate picture of our times!

I was suckled in a creed of pronounced banking honor. In the town where I was born and the one where I was reared, bankers were the finest citizens we had. No bank ever failed in either town. Consequently the greatest shock to me in the past three years has been the changing public thought—especially in New York—about the dependability, indeed, in instances, the honesty of men once looked upon as gods.

* * *

At breakfast they were discussing straight-away editorial writing, the sort that cuts through the mass mind, like the rip saw, a pine knot. The best example was in the New York World 25 years ago. In discussing an eclipse of the sun, the late Frank I. Cobb wrote: "Once all men would have tried by magic and sacrifice to alter the inexorable course of the sun's shadow. Today they are going outdoors to enjoy the spectacle and to understand it more accurately. In the record of that change of attitude toward the universe lies the story of the emancipation of the human mind."

I passed the old World Building the other day, now as shabby and out-at-elbow looking as the scrofulous gilt of its dome. To me the gloomy pile is a monument to the ruined hopes of one who was perhaps as great a journalist as ever lived—the elder Joseph Pulitzer, to intimates "J. P." What a marvelous insight, although blind himself, to the curious workings of the newspaper reading mind! And how oddly his gifts passed with him.

Frederick Sullens reports that Uncle Bill Hardlick, of the Pegash neighborhood, in Mississippi, isn't worrying about the depression. Walking home from town the other day he found a 20-penny nail, carried it to the cross-roads store and swapped it for a dozen shingle nails. "Anyhow, I'll be able to keep my pants up until Christmas," he said.

In front of a Missouri cross-roads store one lazy Sunday morning, I heard a tow-headed youngster yell to a loafer: "Paw, Maw has got your store pants ironed."

I wonder if the theatrical lulls this season are not secretly enjoyed by such veterans as Percy Hammond and Burns Mantle and others of the old guard. A play a day from September to April must be an overdose of make-believe.

And anybody who thinks a column a day, year in and year out, must be just too much fun for anything can step right into the office for a bust in the snoot.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

At 4 this morning I helped my friend put her 16-year-old daughter to bed—dead drunk, after a high school party.

"That's the cause of it all," she wailed. "A thing like this could never have happened to my poor baby before prohibition. But that terrible law is a challenge to any lively youngster. They think it's smart to break it.—And—this is the result!"

There was no answer possible. She was too desperate and heart-broken to listen. Yet I don't think she was fair.

Personally, I'm not for prohibition. I'd give anything I have to see the liquor traffic controlled and young people absolutely protected against the menace. But I don't think that our present prohibition law can or ever will do that. Yet I still don't believe that prohibition is responsible for our pitiful drunken boys and girls.

I BELIEVE OUR PRESENT SYSTEM OF LIFE IS RESPONSIBLE.

I BELIEVE THAT WE HAVE SO ROBBED LIFE OF ALL HEALTHY HARDSHIP AND ADVENTURE THAT WE HAVE DRIVEN YOUNGSTERS TO SEEK THE EXCITEMENT THEY NEED IN UNLAWFUL AND INDECENT DIVERSIONS.

For youngsters do need excitement and hardship. They must have adventure. They need these things for healthy development exactly as they need fresh air, cold water and coarse, wholesome foods.

AND BY OUR MODERN, INDUSTRIAL PROGRAM WE HAVE ROBBED LIFE OF THE EMOTIONAL AND SPIRITUAL "ROUGHAGE."

We have given ourselves over to machines. And those machines have taken all the exciting and interesting jobs which we once did by hand. We no longer go places and do things. We are taken places and we have things done for us.

Once it was an adventure to cross a desert. Now the automobile or train or airplane crosses the desert and you sit on the cushions. At most, you twirl a wheel or push a stick.

Once it was sport to kill a bear and tan a rug. Now you buy your rug at the nearest department store—and see the bear hunt in a movie.

Machines have wiped out our frontiers—stolen our adventures—paralyzed our hands, legs and imaginations. The youngster of today is born into a denatured world in which a machine has all the fun and a human being is merely an Also Ran.

But Life will not be cheated! If you plant grass in a cellar, it will grow pale and spindling—but it will grow nevertheless. Feebly its sick sprout will seek the sunshine and wind which it so desperately needs. And the same law works in human life.

HUMAN LIFE MUST HAVE HARDSHIP, MUST HAVE ADVENTURE, MUST HAVE CREATIVE EXPRESSION.

If you place human energy in a devitalized world, and camp a machine down over it, it will grow peevish and neurotic. BUT IT WILL GROW NEVERTHELESS. Somehow it will find an outlet—an adventure.

If you deny it expression on a cattle ranch, stage, tramp freighter or camp, it will express itself in a parked automobile with a hip flask and a necking party.

Prohibition is, I believe, the wrong way of doing things. And Prohibition has raised plenty of hell. But Prohibition isn't to blame for that poor, drunken little girl. Our pop-eyed, cruel civilization is to blame . . . A CIVILIZATION THAT RATES A MACHINE AS MORE VALUABLE THAN A CHILD.

Caught in the Act: Smith in Boston

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Alfred E. Smith's Boston speech fairly pulverized the incompetents and worse now in control of the executive department of the government; but just a word first on other developments of the campaign.

The cabinet of all the deficiencies is still harping on sound money—like Cervantes' funny man fighting unexisting foes. After all, all the greenbacks were issued by the Republican party and they have not redeemed all of them yet.

Mr. Hoover was grappling like a hero of mythology to save the gold standard which Ogden Mills and Eugene Meyer at the time said never was in danger. And now James M. Beck is quite sure that Roosevelt will bring us a Soviet government. Silly stuff and food for morons.

But the viciousness and dishonesty of the Hoover managers has been shown up by the Literary Digest. The Hoover headquarters in Chicago disseminated the lie that the Literary Digest, whose poll shows a Roosevelt landslide, had received 35,000 letters asking that their votes be changed from Roosevelt to Hoover. This lie was given further circulation by William Hard over the radio paid for by the Administration of the Panic.

And it was a lie—a rather crude and a most brazen lie.

The Literary Digest investigated and traced the lie to the stock market firm of Winthrop, Mitchell & Co., which sent this lie to all its branches throughout the United States. The Literary Digest says it is a lie and demands a retraction.

And so the stock market is in politics up to its ears: put a pin in that. Not every one on the stock market—which puts it up to the head of the New York Stock Exchange to administer a proper rebuke, and up to the Hoover committee to apologize to the Literary Digest.

As Silent As The Sphinx

Al Smith's Boston speech was a devastating analysis of the incompetence and the blunders and misrepresentations of the Hoover regime. The speaker was in fine fettle and in his best form.

Apropos of Mr. Hoover's self-hero tale of how he balanced the budget, solitary and alone, Mr. Smith calls attention to the policy of the administration which, like Micawber, has always been waiting for something to turn up.

In 1930, when the Treasury was facing a deficit of a billion, the administration was silent as the sphinx—waiting for something to turn up. It proposed no new taxes; it effected no economies. "Because," as Smith says, "the administration was living in the hope that things would rectify themselves." May we suggest another reason?—the election of 1930 was in the offing.

Then came the absolute necessity and the killing tax bill imposed at a time when business could least afford it and when it was certain to retard recovery.

Deceit again!

What Do Businessmen Think of That?

At the time the Treasury was facing its deficit of a billion in 1930, the administration had not even considered the device of effecting economies in administration. The cost of government had mounted dizzily under Hoover—but nothing was done. The deficit was certain—but nothing was done. And nothing was begun, or even seriously discussed until the Democratic House began to consider measures for slashing the cost of government. We have shown how the Democratic House did slash $335,000,000 from the amount demanded by the administration on its estimates. And now, with an impudence pardonable only in a public man hysterical with fear, Mr. Hoover is attacking the Democrats for not permitting him to reorganize the government. Smith answers:

"With every opportunity at hand, absolutely nothing was done by the Republican administration to curtail the cost of government, although it was pledged from the platform of 1920 right up to the platform of 1928 to the promise of reorganization of the federal government in order to cut out overlapping and waste and duplication of effort, looking not only to efficiency but to greater economy in the conduct of the nation's business."

What do businessmen think of that? Would it not have been to their interest to have had a little "radicalism" there from Smith and Roosevelt?

Wizard on Figues and A Bit Weak on Facts

Smith reminds us that we have piled up another deficit of half a billion—even under the onerous taxation recently levied. This is due to the utter incompetency of Ogden Mills and the administration intelligently to gauge conditions.

We had a dangerous delay in the "balancing of the budget" last spring, because every time the House had a bill prepared on the estimates of Mr. Mills he appeared with the admission that he had been hundreds of millions off! If the budget is not now balanced, it is because for the third time Mills has blundered. He is a wizard on figures and a bit weak on facts.

Hoover Is Not A Leader

We are glad a man of Smith's standing has pointed out the utter hypocrisy and the impudent misrepresentations of the Cabinet of all the Deficiencies in attacking the Democrats in the House for the failure of many to stand by their leaders on the tax bill. Smith answers:

"What about the Republican members of the House? Was he able to hold them? He was not. Was he able to deliver them for his policies? He was not."

The leader on the floor on the tax bill opposition was a Republican.

The leader on the floor for the Goldsborough bill of which we hear so much was Luce, of Massachusetts, a reactionary, ultra-conservative Republican leader.

With all the power of the presidency behind him, Mr. Hoover has never been able to lead his own men—because he is not a leader and does not know how to govern.

Boston Knows Moses

I am glad, too, that Mr. Smith called attention to the hypocrisy of his most tricky enemies of 1928 in his reference to Senator Moses' appearance in Boston to protest against the "mistreatment" of Al Smith. Thus:

"I have the kindliest feeling for every living being. But I am a little bit suspicious when Senator Moses gets so terribly excited and wrought up and speaks with a sob in his voice because I was not nominated, and what a terrible thing it was."

Al Smith's Frank Statement

Nothing finer has ever been uttered than Al Smith's frank statement on the results of the Democratic convention. Nothing finer than his analysis of what America means to the human race. Nothing more characteristic of him than his earnest plea for the triumph of the principles of government he thinks necessary for the preservation of the opportunities for the average man with which Providence so bountifully blessed us.

After wading through the heavy, labored concoctions of misrepresentations and stupidities of the speeches of the Cabinet of all the Deficiencies this frank, honest, open, sincere utterance of Al Smith comes like a breath of fresh air from over a fragrant field.
